Campus Times

April 10, 2026 | Serving the University of La Verne Community Since 1919 | Vol. 134, No. 21

Inside

Protesters fill streets of Claremont p2

La Verne egg hunt draws crowd of kids p4

Leopards sweep Caltech p8

Rousseau's themes resonate today

Donya Rouzbehi
Sports Editor

Jesse Juarez

Jason Neidleman, professor of political science, presents his faculty lecture, "Desiccated Democracy," Tuesday in the Quay Davis Executive Board Room. After his lecture, Neidleman said that he hopes both students and faculty will focus and dive deeper into democracy within our society. Neidleman tied themes from Aristotle's philosophy and Rousseau's concept of democracy and political culture.

Jason Neidleman, professor of political science, discussed "Desiccated Democracy" Tuesday in the Quay Davis Executive Board Room.

Before an audience of about a dozen community members, the lecture focused on Jean-Jaques Rousseau's political theory about cultural politics, stemming from civic virtue and patriotism.

In his presentation, "Desiccated Democracy: Jean-Jacques Rousseau on the Cultural Conditions of Democratic Vitality."

Neidleman also discussed how Rousseau theorized formal politics grounded in popular sovereignty.

Neidleman tied themes from Aristotle's philosophy and Rousseau's concept of democracy and political culture. And he connected his research to the political moment.

"Aristotle presumed a diverse society where people have deep differences," Neidleman said. "Differences that really can't be bridged, so that might be more relevant for us."

Rousseau believed that sovereign power originates with the people, Neidleman said, adding that it must be actively practiced by the people. Rousseau's notion of civic virtue means that people learn to not prioritize their own interests but instead to think about what benefits everyone.

"The sphere of politics might be kind of thin in a society like ours, where maybe we don't have that much in common," Neidleman said. "And that's okay, because you can't have politics that penetrate into areas where you have these deep differences."

Without this mindset, popular sovereignty would ultimately collapse into inequality.

His research shows that the real foundation of Rousseau's politics isn't just institutional, but cultural, shaping how a society behaves and thinks.

Neidleman said the themes of democracy and cultural politics are more relevant now than ever before.

"Do our democratic institutions depend on thinking about civic virtue?" Neidleman asked the audience.

Kenneth Marcus, professor of history, said he thought the lecture was very timely.

"Since we do live in a time of crisis in our democracy, you want to look for some reasons why there is a crisis and how can one improve it?" Marcus said.

Several of Neidleman's students who attended the lecture said they appreciated seeing the scholar-side of their instructor.

"We've never been able to see him in his element," said Samantha Santillano, junior political science major. "To see a professor talk about what he's passionate about was a different perspective."

Junior political science major Anthony Rojas agreed.

"It seems like a life-long scholar expedition," Rojas said. "So just being able to see him follow that path lets you see him differently."

Donya Rouzbehi can be reached at donya.rouzbehi@laverne.edu.

Campus Times
Spring 2026

Editor-in-Chief
Olivia Russo

LV Life Editor ..... Margaret Contreras
Arts Editor/
Social Media Editor ..... Marina Bravo
Sports Editor ..... Donya Rouzbehi
Photography Editor ..... Liberty Belle
Senior Editor ..... Anisa Salazar
Assistant Editor ..... Cassidy Diaz

Reporters
Raquel Campos, Daniel Franklin, Kalayah Frazier, Lila Gongora, Asha Longsworth, Natalia Rodriguez, Aniyha Williams

Photographers
Aaliyah Alamillo, Stephanie Amaya, Ronald Banks, Marina Bravo, Mia Byington, Antonio Ceniceros, Jesse Juarez, Jasmine Lyn, Amore Mason, Joseph Nocero, Baljot Rathor, Vicente Rodriguez

Chief Adviser ..... Elizabeth Zwerling
Photography Adviser/
Production Manager ..... Eric Borer

Campus Times Online

The award-winning Campus Times online edition is updated throughout the week with event coverage and breaking news. Visit lvcampustimes.org for additional current and past stories. You can like us on Facebook and follow us on Instagram @campustimes, TikTok @campustimes and Bluesky @campustimes.bsky.social for all the latest updates on local and on-campus news. Send us story ideas over social media or email to ctimes@laverne.edu.

Corrections

The Campus Times is committed to accuracy. When we make mistakes, however, it is our policy to correct them as soon as they are brought to our attention.

If you find a mistake in the Campus Times, please let us know at ctimes@laverne.edu.

Letters to the Editor

The Campus Times encourages readers to submit letters to the editors regarding topics covered in the paper. Letters should be no more than 400 words in length and are due by Tuesday at 3 p.m. The Campus Times reserves the right to edit letters for clarity, space and libel. Letters may be sent to ctimes@laverne.edu.

The Campus Times is published weekly by the Communications Department, except during examination and vacation periods, by journalism students of the University of La Verne, 1950 Third Street, La Verne, California, 91750. The Campus Times is a laboratory publication for Newspaper Production classes Journalism 220, Journalism 320 and Journalism 408. Signed columns are the opinion of the individuals and do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the Campus Times. For advertising information, call 909-448-4761 or email ctimesad@laverne.edu*.*

©Campus Times, 2026

Lecture urges for support of LGBTQ+

Kalayah Frazier
Staff Writer

Students gathered Wednesday in the Quay Davis Executive Board Room for the semester's fifth installment of the Belongingness Lecture Series.

Director of Multicultural Affairs Daniel Loera introduced the topic "Sexual Identity, Homophobia and Heterosexism."

Loera talked about acceptance of the LGBTQ+ community, and he explained the need for openness and understanding.

"People are (often) discouraged from being their true sexual identity due to the pressures of the outside world," Loera said. "No one realizes how that could be detrimental to people's personal experience of trying to find themselves."

Loera said it is important to create spaces where people feel accepted. For the event, he encouraged students to introduce themselves to one another.

Then Loera introduced the first activity. He read out statements, and asked students to go to one side of the room if they agreed and the other side of the room if they disagreed.

The prompts had to do with their feelings and experiences with LGBTQ+ community, and Loera encouraged the participants to talk about their experiences of the activity.

"It's always nice to be reminded of the realities of other people, especially the people that I'm surrounded by on campus," said Garrett Gonzales, junior English major. "I get to understand their personal experiences that are sometimes things I can't relate to and it's like a safe space for people that get to talk on the topics."

The event also featured a slideshow that considered the language "heterosexual," "homophobia," "coming out," and more.

"It's a very good opportunity to learn not only about yourself, but the community around you," said junior English major Connor Bartlett.

Kalayah Frazier can be reached at kalayah.frazier@laverne.edu.

On the Cover

Protestors crowd the streets of Claremont March 28 during a No Kings protest. The event took place along Foothill Boulevard roughly between Mountain Avenue and College Avenue. / photo by Mia Byington

Dinner celebrates support for women

Lila Gongora
Staff Writer

The Sisters of Essence hosted their second annual Women's Appreciation Dinner on Tuesday in the Campus Center Ballrooms.

The event is designed to highlight and honor the women of ULV who have made an impact in the community through academia, leadership or positivity.

The event began with an opening address from two of the organization members.

Brianna Morris, the organization's president, and Destiny Tenor, the organization's secretary and treasurer, spoke as they invited individuals to enjoy dinner catered by Messi Soul Kitchen.

"I'm looking forward to seeing a lot of women who were nominated for these awards, who don't usually get appreciation like they should, be able to shine and see how the community does appreciate them," said Morris, a junior chemistry major.

"I think it's important for the community to get involved and show up to events like this because it's important to highlight women of color who oftentimes are not put on the list."

The ballroom was draped in pink and gold decor, creating an elegant scene for about 50 La Verne community members, from across programs, who showed up to mingle and celebrate the women of ULV.

During dinner students, faculty and staff got to know one another on a deeper level.

"I knew that community would be forged here and the Sisters of Essence do a great job of incorporating the things that our campus says it cares about," said Marquisha Frost, associate vice president for inclusive excellence and mission integration.

"There's a shortage of spaces like this, so any opportunity where there is a chance to celebrate women and women of color is vitally important."

Following the meal, many women received awards for their contributions to change and progress at the University, including Frost.

More than 10 awards in total were distributed including the Legacy Award, Sisterhood Award, Resilience Award and Distinguished Advisor Award.

Among those recognized were College of Arts and Sciences Dean Shannon Matthews and Associate Dean Ngoc Bui, along with Director of Student Engagement Cindy Vallejo-Victoria.

Sisters of Essence Vice President Kira Annis, senior biology major; and member Asha Jones, senior psychology major, both were honored.

Awardees were recognized for fostering a sense of community and showing consistent efforts to lift up other women and feminine-presenting people.

"I'm really glad that we framed this event towards understanding what it means to have femininity and live in a world where we feel that we are overlooked, unheard of, or unappreciated," Annis said.

"I wanted to make this event feel like everybody was seen or looked at, even our staff on campus where so many women are overlooked."

"Receiving this award means so much because it helps me remember that my impact does exceed me in being a residence assistant last year, Psi Chi president this year, and a member of BSU and the Sisters of Essence," said Jones, who received the Legacy Award.

"I forget how much I interact with people on a day-to-day basis and how meaningful I can be to them."

The event concluded with a group picture including all the people who attended the dinner.

Lila Gongora can be reached at lila.gongora@laverne.edu.

No Kings Protest

A protester holds the American flag upside down March 28 during a No Kings protest in Claremont. An upside-down flag is typically used in protests as a sign of dire distress.

photography by Mia Byington

Top: Protesters wait to cross Indian Hill Boulevard in Claremont during a No Kings protest March 28. According to the BBC, more than 8 million people protested nationwide, making it the largest public demonstration in U.S. history.

Above: Marchers cross Indian Hill Boulevard in Claremont March 28 during a No Kings protest. The protest movement was organized by Indivisible, a nationwide organization that works to stop the rise in authoritarianism in the United States.

La Verne egg hunt celebrates spring

Lila Gongora
Staff Writer

Jasmine Lyn

Kids proudly show off their eggs to their families at the La Verne Eggcellent Adventure on March 27 in Heritage Park. This is the fourth consecutive year for the event held in the park, which ran from 9 a.m. to noon. All of the eggs were hidden in the branches of short orange trees and scattered on the ground. Hundreds of kids participated in the annual egg hunt.

The La Verne Parks and Recreation Department threw their annual Egg-cellent Adventure event for the spring season at Heritage Park on March 28.

The event was free entry and consisted of multiple egg hunts for families with six sponsors and four food and craft vendors.

The three egg hunts that took place were for different age groups ranging from one to twelve years old as families were able to immerse themselves in the adventure that was filled with pastel colors and family bonding time on a sunny day.

Jesse Cervantes, parks and recreation coordinator for the La Verne Parks and Recreation Department, organized the event this year.

"It is incredibly important to be able to offer recreation programs directly to the community," Cervantes said. "It is beneficial to the community's social and mental well being to socialize with other community members and for children, that they can socialize with others of their own age."

The event has been held at Heritage Park in La Verne for the last four years as well as events like Winter Wonderland that encapsulates Christmas fun.

Other events like Trunk or Treat have been held at the La Verne City Hall parking lot.

An Easter Bunny attended this event, as well, to take pictures with families.

Children were able to get their face painted and take home their favorite animal from a balloon artist.

The vendors at these events contribute to the overall atmosphere, making the day more versatile for all age groups.

Vendors at this event included a craft jewelry maker called See the Sunshine along with two ice cream and snack vendors, and a tea and refresher caterer called Cha So Good.

Owners of Cha So Good, Nina Prajaksilpthai, a University of La Verne alumna, and Joseph Montes find it important to get out in their community to cater events like these.

They also catered the La Verne Homecoming event they attended this past fall.

"We want to separate ourselves from the big chains and make our brand more local and operate only where we reside rather than trying to be as big as we can be," Montes said. "Seeing the kids happy was infectious and we had a good time based on that energy."

Events like these would not be able to take place without community sponsors like the La Verne Rotary Club who has sponsored the event for the last four years.

They work with the Parks and Recreation Department to put on the Egg-cellent Adventure event, a senior holiday luncheon during the winter, and a Thanksgiving Project for local food insecure families.

Debbie Deacy, club president of the Rotary Club, is serving her second term as president. She is also the executive director of purchasing and procurement services at the University of La Verne.

"The club had a booth and it was pretty active because we had a spinning wheel and the kids could spin to win a rubber ducky, piece of candy, or raffle ticket," Deacy said. "These events are a matter of community and bringing the La Verne residents together to have a family fun event to enrich their lives."

Parents and family members were seen helping their children find eggs and navigate the event.

"I found so many eggs and they were all colorful," 6-year-old Lucas said. "I had fun."

The next big event for the La Verne Parks and Recreation Department will be the Fourth of July Parade.

Lila Gongora can be reached at lila.gongora@laverne.edu.

Students spring into wellness and unwind

The Campus Activities Board's Spring Into Wellness event was held Tuesday in Sneaky Park. It featured music, frozen yogurt, letter writing and more. Roughly 50 students attended the event.

"I wanted to create a peaceful and relaxed environment where students could come and hang out, enjoy a sweet treat and truly enjoy the spring season," CAB Health and Wellness Chair Alejandra Muratalla said.

In honor of spring, the event featured a flower bouquet-making station.

"I really loved the flowers," Magnolia Brown, junior political science major, said.

"Many students feel like they missed out on the chance to get involved," said freshman biology major Deon Jordan. "(This) shows that there are many ways to be included and supported outside of class," Jordan said.

—Aniyha Williams

Stephanie Amaya

Senior criminology majors Emilia Enriquez, Anais Flix and senior economics major Debanhi Magana create flower bouquets at the Spring into Wellness event hosted by the Campus Activities Board at Sneaky Park on Tuesday. The event provided students refreshments, giveaways and other activities. About 50 students attended the Spring into Wellness event.

Seder meal marks Passover holiday

Community experiences tradition

Aniyha Williams
Staff Writer

About 30 La Verne community members gathered in the Campus Center Ballroom Monday for a Passover Seder.

The ceremony and meal was led by Paul Buch, cantor at Pomona's Temple Beth Israel.

It was sponsored by the University's interfaith fellows, the Office of Religious and Spiritual Life and Common Ground.

The Seder is a celebration and ceremony in honor of the Passover holiday. It recalls the story of Jews' exodus from slavery to freedom.

The dinner features a seder plate, with symbolic foods, that help tell the story.

Participants read from the haggadah and sampled the various foods, such as bitter herbs, boiled eggs, haroset, made of apples and nuts and more.

The meal also featured matzah instead of bread. The flatbread is part of the story; the Jews had to flee Egypt so fast, their bread dough did not have time to rise. Observant Jews eat only matzah and unleavened baked goods during the eight days of Passover.

Buch, who led the seder with readings and music, has done so here for 20 years.

"Participating at the University…has enabled me to really get to know the community and acknowledge their commitment to diversity, inclusion and uplifting its students," Buch said.

"As a Jewish student, this event is also integral to the observance of the holiday of Passover, " said Adonis Borer, senior psychology major and president of Common Ground. "It's a really helpful resource to be able to have a seder on campus."

Marquisha Frost, vice president for inclusive excellence and mission integration agreed.

"Events like the Passover Seder play a vital role in representing our core values (of) community engagement, diversity and inclusion," Frost said.

Aniyha Williams can be reached at aniyhawilliams@laverne.edu.

Antonio Ceniceros

Paul Buch, cantor from Temple Beth Israel in Pomona, leads the celebration of Passover through songs, rituals, and community reading in the Campus Center Ballroom. The University's annual Passover Seder event took place Monday evening with an attendance of more than 20 people. Seder is a celebration and ceremony in honor of the Passover holiday.

CAB event brings the Wild West to commuter students

Kalayah Frazier
Staff Writer

The Campus Activities Board hosted a cowboy-themed event geared toward commuter students on Wednesday in Sneaky Park. Roughly 40 students attended the event. It included a raffle, mechanical bull rides and Raising Canes chicken fingers.

With country music playing, students mingled and seemed to enjoy the activities. While geared toward commuter students, it was attended by both on- and off-campus residents.

"It's really good to have the students engage in activities," said Vallerie Leon, freshman political science major who helped plan the event. "Especially in the middle of the week, in between classes."

Jessica Wirtz, freshman political science major, also enjoyed the activities. As a commuter herself she said it made her feel "part of the La Verne experience."

"I hope that there will continue to be more events for commuter students," said Alondra Ortega, freshman Spanish major who attended. "It honestly makes me feel like I'm actually a part of campus and not just another student that only comes here for academics."

Kalayah Frazier can be reached at kalayah.frazier@laverne.edu.

Stephanie Amaya

Kelani Johnson, junior business administration major, takes a ride on the mechanical bull Wednesday at Sneaky Park at the Commuter Round-Up event hosted by the Campus Activities Board. Roughly 40 students who attended the event were given free food, free event giveaway t-shirts and the opportunity to enter in a raffle, while listening to country music.

Arts, etc...

Happenings

Lavernapalooza

Lavernapalooza, the annual concert event, will be held at 7:30 p.m. on May 7 at the Fox Theater in Pomona. One of the headliners is Latin EDM DJ BOLO. Other performers will be announced by the Campus Activities Board. Tickets are free for undergraduate students. For others, it is $44.

For more information, visit foxpomona.com/events.

Unity Through Rhythm

The University of La Verne music department will present Unity Through Rhythm at 3 p.m. on May 18 in the Morgan Auditorium. This is the finale for the Sundays at Morgan music series. It will feature music from Igaba, Ron Powell, Nat Scott, Cory Hogan and Homero Chavez.

Suggested donation is $20. For more information email music@laverne.edu.

Fired in Revolution

The American Museum of Ceramic Art is showing "Fired in Revolution: Ceramics from the People's Republic of China." The exhibit features ceramic art including molded figures, vessels, wall hangings, sculptures and more. It's curated by Jamie Kwan and Cooper Hewitt. The show runs through May 3.

For more information, visit amoca.org/current-exhibits/fired_in_revolution.

'AIR 2026: Compulsion'

On exhibit at the American Museum of Ceramic Art is "AIR 2026: Compulsion," features the eclectic works of Bianca MacPherson, Kristy Moreno, Maxwell Henderson and Yoon Hwang.

The exhibition highlights each of the artists' work at their time as resident artists. The exhibition will run until May 31.

For more information, visit amoca.org/future-exhibitions/compulsion.

—Cassidy Diaz

Museum showcases the American Dream

by Natalia Rodriguez

photography by Joseph Nocero

Photographer Julian Lucas is introduced by Seth Pringle, director of the Claremont Lewis Museum of Art, at the reception for Lucas' exhibition "Happiness Pursued. Paradise Lost." on Saturday. Lucas discussed his photographic journey and his motivations for the project. The show will run until July 12.

The Claremont Lewis Museum of Art is showcasing "Julian Lucas: Happiness Pursued. Paradise Lost," an exhibition featuring photographs by Claremont-based photographer Julian Lucas.

The exhibit opened with a reception on Saturday. Approximately 60 people attended. The exhibit highlighted themes of home and the idea of the American Dream.

"It's a representation of African people," Melissa Primus, an event-goer and family friend of Lucas', said. "African American people inside of their own homes."

Photographs from Lucas' "Exodus" and "Apt.31" series were split into three rooms of the museum.

"Apt. 31" is a collection of snapshots of a family residing in its one-bedroom apartment. In them, the viewer can see how the subjects interact with each other and the space around them.

Lucas' statement about "Apt. 31," which is presented on one of the museum's walls, states that the project is "a study of social norms, which challenges all parties involved: the dwellers and the viewers. It is an invitation to come to one's own understanding, beyond our perception of social normality and comfort levels."

"I think a lot of people see flaws in the American Dream philosophy, so I think it's very relevant right now," Tessa Casper, a freshman studying physics at Citrus College, said. "Showing the flaws, and that ideal, and what it looks like in real people's lives, and how they respond to real-life events in relation to that idea."

The second room was transformed into a living room similar to the one from Lucas' childhood. The walls were lined with multiple pictures and artwork. The table at the center of the room displayed many magazines between two vases filled with flowers. There was an old-style television in one corner playing Spike Lee's "Do the Right Thing," a 1989 movie that highlighted racial tensions between many groups of people.

> 'I want (the audience) to be immersed in the space, and be immersed in the home.'
> —Julian Lucas, photographer

Mairead Lucke, a freshman studying theatre at UC San Diego, mentioned that the living room scene was her favorite in the exhibition.

"I think I could just stay there for hours just poking through every single little detail in that room," Lucke said.

Lastly, the third room depicts photographs from Lucas' "Exodus" series, a collection reflecting the continued story of the Great Migration in relation to the American Dream.

The Great Migration refers to the period between 1910 and 1970 when Black Americans moved from the American South to Northern, Midwestern and Western states, according to the National Archives, in which people tried creating homes away from oppression in the South.

Lucas mentioned growing up as a latch-key kid to a working mother and having to look after younger siblings. He stated that many of his friends grew up in similar circumstances.

Many of the pictures show people standing before their homes, but others depict people who had lost their homes to the Altadena fires.

"It's almost like a phoenix rising from the ashes and moving on, moving forward," Anita Lewis, Lucas' younger sister, said. "And that's reality. That's the real American Dream right there. It's not everything coming so easy, it's working for it."

Lewis stated that the work that stood out to her was the large, mural-like photograph of Lucas, their mother, and their other sister, Shelli Shaw.

"I want (the audience) to be immersed in the space, and be immersed in the home," Lucas said. "What home was for Black people, what it looked like."

The show runs until July 12. The Claremont Lewis Museum of Art is open from noon to 4 p.m. Thursdays and Saturdays, noon to 7 p.m. Fridays and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sundays. For more information, visit clmoa.org.

Natalia Rodriguez can be reached at natalia.rodriguez@laverne.edu.

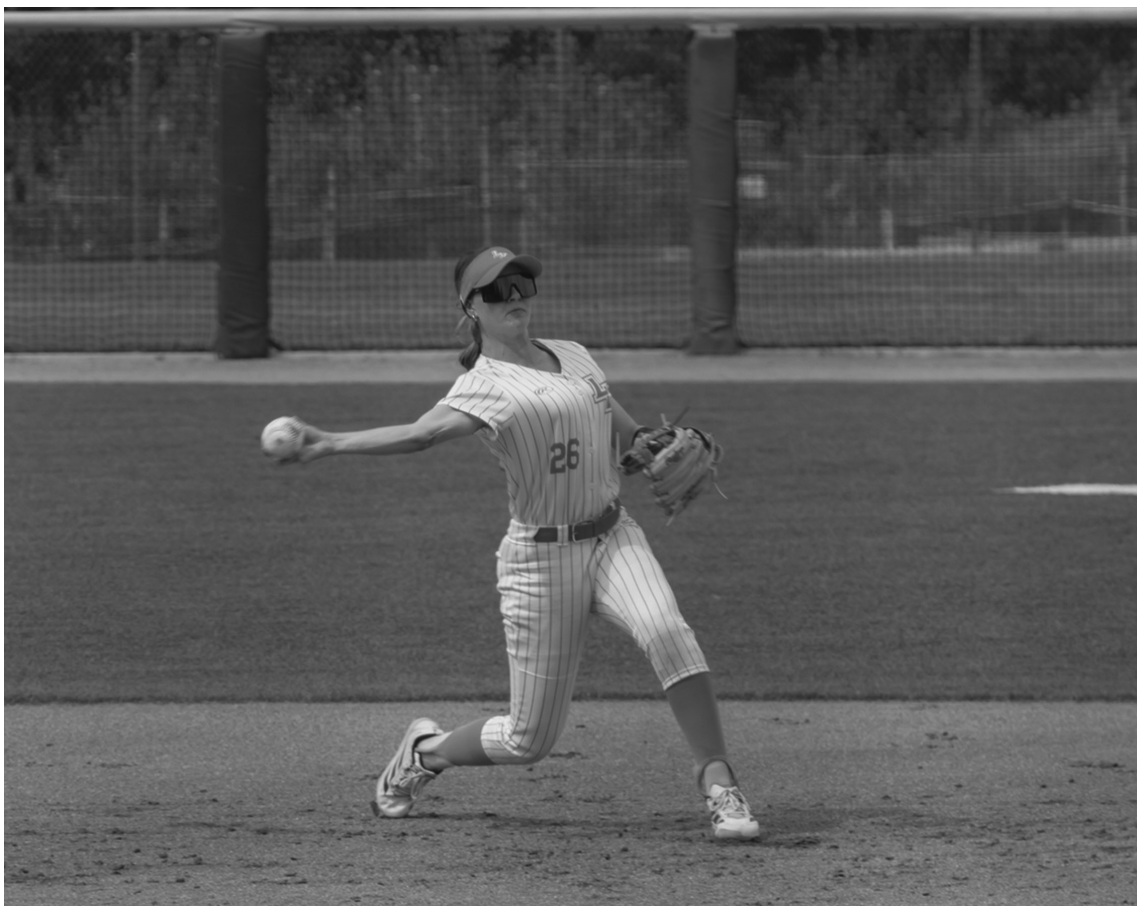
Softball drops pair of doubleheaders

Ronald Banks

Left: La Verne sophomore pitcher Briana Vasquez delivers a pitch during the third inning against Redlands on Saturday at Campus West, keeping the Leopards within reach as they looked to tie the game. Vasquez pitched a complete game, giving up three earned runs in the Leopards' 6-3 loss in the first game of the doubleheader.

Bottom left: Junior shortstop Brooke Petretti throws to first for a put out against Elmhurst on March 28 at Campus West. The Leopards are 11-17 overall and 5-4 in the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

Bottom right: La Verne senior outfielder Annica Luna bats at the softball game on March 30 at Campus West. Luna had three hits against Williams during the game, but the Leopards lost both games of the doubleheader, 2-1 and 5-0.



Joseph Nocero

Baljot Rathor

LEOPARD SCOREBOARD

AT THE BUZZER

Baseball, April 3
La Verne – 11
Caltech – 1

Baseball, April 4
Caltech – 3
La Verne – 13

Baseball, April 4
Caltech – 0
La Verne – 15

Women's Water Polo, April 4
Claremont-Mudd-Scripps – 26
La Verne – 8

SCHEDULE

Friday
Softball vs. Cal Lutheran, 3 p.m.
Baseball vs. Cal Lutheran, 3 p.m.

Saturday
Baseball @ Cal Lutheran, 11 a.m.
Women's water polo @ Cal Lutheran, 11 a.m.
Softball @ Cal Lutheran, noon
Baseball @ Cal Lutheran, 2 p.m.
Softball @ Cal Lutheran, 2 p.m.

WOMEN'S WATER POLO STANDINGS

	SCIAC	Overall
Pomona-Pitzer	11-0	17-15
Claremont-Mudd-Scripps	10-1	14-10
Cal Lutheran	8-2	12-11
Chapman	7-4	11-10
Whittier	4-7	5-20
Redlands	3-7	5-18
Occidental	3-8	5-20
La Verne	2-9	2-25

Baseball dominates Caltech in sweep

Anisa Salazar
Senior Editor

Aaliyah Alamillo

La Verne freshman left hand pitcher Jack Holguin is drenched and receives congratulations from the Leopards after throwing a no-hitter at Ben Hines Field on Saturday against Caltech. Holguin threw for seven innings for the first time in his collegiate career.

A no-hitter by freshman pitcher Jack Holguin capped off an explosive weekend for the Leopards as they swept Caltech in their three-game series, only giving up three runs and accumulating 28 total runs between their doubleheader games on Saturday.

La Verne started the weekend winning, 11-7, on April 3 at Caltech. They continued this streak during their doubleheader with a 13-3 win for game one and 15-0 win for game two on Saturday at Ben Hines Field.

"We wanted to try and get into their bullpen as soon as we could, and so having really quality at-bats in the first few innings, and making sure we stayed in the strike zone offensively," head coach Scott Winterburn said. "We did execute that, and it created a lot of base runners, and ended up resulting in scoring some runs … It was probably the catalyst offensively for us scoring runs."

In the first game of the doubleheader, Caltech acted quickly to put a run on the board, but the Leopards recorded two runs to counter in the bottom of the first inning.

The Beavers took the lead in the third inning, 3-2, but that did not last long once the Leopards caught momentum and put up six runs in the fourth inning.

With base loaded, senior second baseman Aidan Salcedo doubled with a hit to right field, bringing in the tying and go-ahead runs.

"I knew I had to put a ball in play for my team," Salcedo said. "It was an axis spot, so I just had to get a ball in the air. I got a little bit behind it, and it kept carrying and burnt the right fielder, so I got a double out of it. In my head, I just wanted to do my job as a player and get the ball in the air to right field."

The fourth inning rally continued with senior catcher Nate Perry clearing the bases with a triple, junior outfielder Alek Bautista hitting a sacrifice fly ball and a single to center field from junior outfielder Jake Ledford, bringing the inning to a close with Leopards taking charge, 8-3.

Between Perry's four at-bats, he had two hits and four RBIs. It was important for him to keep the lineup moving and get the next guy an opportunity at the plate.

"I feel like we were really confident, we weren't really worried about the umpire or external factors," Perry said. "We just went out there and did what we needed to do."

The Beavers' offence was silent in the fifth inning while the Leopards recorded three more runs. RBIs from Perry, senior first baseman Aaron Whobrey and sophomore third baseman RJ Libby brought the score to 11-3.

The game ended by mercy rule after the seventh, but the Leopards did not leave without tallying two more runs for the scoreboard.

Salcedo hit his fourth double of the game in the seventh with a shot that hit the wall in left field. Perry got walked after being hit by a pitch from the Beavers, and with freshman pinch hitter Zachary Janczyk's double to left field, both men were brought home.

Leopards closed out game one of the doubleheader with a win, 13-3, and shut out the Beavers in game two, 15-0, after Holguin threw an amazing, no-hit performance. He struck out 10 in seven innings with no walks.

Following the rest of the season, Winterburn plans to stay on top of their game and not get complacent with the confidence of their current win streak.

"We're looking for a level of commitment from guys that they're going to battle through confident and non-confident times," Winterburn said. "I just think it shows us that if we play together in the way we're capable of, we can beat anybody in the country, and we can lose to anybody in the country, so it requires our best effort each and every time."

La Verne now has a conference record of 7-5 and will face Cal Lutheran at 3 p.m. Friday at Ben Hines Field.

Anisa Salazar can be reached at anisa.salazar@laverne.edu.

Water polo loses conference match

Ronald Banks

La Verne senior attacker Brooklyn Young attempts a shot during the Leopards' matchup against Claremont-Mudd-Scripps at the La Verne Aquatic Center on Saturday. Young scored four goals in the contest.