University expanding into La Verne

•Council approves master plan

by Jennifer Parsons
Staff Writer

Due to everyday demands for more space, expansion at the University of La Verne looks like a promising possibility in the next decade.

The master plan that ULV has developed with a consulting firm in the last two years was approved by the city's planning department Jan. 8, and by the La Verne City Council March 3. All voting members of the city council approved and voted to adopt the master plan.

"The city requires you to have a master plan and their approval. It lays out the general concepts for expansion but does not always incorporate the additions or changes. The city needs a general idea of the direction the campus will take in the future," said President Stephen Morgan.

A total of 3.5 acres are incorporated into the master plan. One phase of the expansion consists of two square blocks, between D and E Street, south of Second Street until Arrow Highway and two other dirt lots. Because of certain zoning regulations, the city is limiting the expansion areas from most residential sections.

Some areas of the land incorporated into the master plan are currently owned. The University is in no hurry to purchase all of the land at once, nor can it afford to, but hopes the land will be purchased as it becomes available.

Cost for this project is unknown, depending on decisions made in the future, but the money is assumed to come from contributions from individuals, foundations, corporations and secured loans.

"The cost depends on decisions we make as we go, also on how the University decides to grow as it visits its own strategic plan and assigns priorities to different programs," said Brian Worley, director of facilities management.

The refurbishing of the new Education Building is one phase of the master plan that has already begun, although due to the current budget cut, further construction of the building has been put on hold. It is uncertain whether or not the budget cut will affect any other areas in the master plan.

Other future ideas for expansion include moving the baseball and soccer fields into the surplus land of the Metropolitan Water District near Brackett Airport. Another possibility is to move the football field and track and have shuttle runs and a parking facility to commute to the site, less than one half mile away from campus. If the softball field is moved off First Street, a multilevel parking facility with tennis courts on top could be built in its place, according to Worley.

Although many decisions have not been made certain, it does seem that ULV will gain more space in the near future.

"Any institution needs to plan for expansion. It is a natural aspect of being a vital institution. It can't grow and develop programs if it doesn't have the space also due to the FTE (Full Time Equivilency) that has risen dramatically," said Worley.

"The University has a need for additional space. We took the needs and worked with professional planners," said Dr. Morgan.

"This plan allows for the creation of new buildings. It will certainly help to meet demands being placed on us," said Worley.

Brandt burglarized

by Veronica L. McClendon
Staff Writer

A burglary took place on the first floor of Brandt Hall on Thursday morning, Feb. 27, sometime between 9:30 and 11:30.

The suspect is accused of going in through the window facing Bonita Avenue. On a report filed by Campus Safety the victim said he left his room and the windows were locked.

The stolen items consisted of a laptop computer with fax modem and other cords and adapters. The estimated value of the stolen items is $4,500.

John Lentz, director of campus safety, said, "There was no true sign of forced entry." No windows were broken nor doors kicked in.

"The only thing we have that implies forced entry is the screen was missing off the window," said Lentz.

He said the case is out of the ordinary. "It was a little unusual in that there was no forced entry, no suspects were seen, and there were other valuable goods in the room and the were not stolen," said Lentz. "The suspect only seemed to be after computer equipment."

Security stated that the University of La Verne is not responsible for any stolen private property. If a student's parents have home owner's insurance and there is an extension on their policy, then there is a possibility that the policy will cover the stolen merchandise.

It is important to make sure that one's property is clearly identifiable with either a drivers license number or serial numbers on the item. It will help out the police department and Campus Safety a great deal.

Lentz said that in order to make the campus a safer place, everyone should take accountability.

"Most crime on college campuses is from off-campus offenders," said Lentz.

Pilgreen joins faculty ranks

by Sandra Archuleta
Staff Writer

Dr. Janice Pilgreen, a teacher for 22 years at Glendale High School and two years (part-time) at the University of La Verne, is the new assistant professor of reading and literacy at ULV.

She was the top candidate for the position, after Jim Dunne, professor of education, went on to work for another part of ULV.

Dr. Pilgreen said, "It is nice to be here full-time, I can meet with my students when they have questions or concerns."

Dr. Tom McGuire, professor of education and Education Department chair, said, "I've been pleased to hire someone full-time that I've worked with part-time, to see what she has done."

Dr. McGuire said, "I don't know how we could have done better. She seems to me like a perfect role model for prospective teachers. She acts all the way and behaves like the perfect teacher."

Dr. John Gingrich, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, refers to Dr. Pilgreen as a part of the "La Verne kind of people, who has high expectations, but at the same time gets to know her students on a personal level."

Dr. Pilgreen said, "It's important to develop a personal relationship with students. Students are involved in many challenging programs; a lot of them have families, work and still trying to go to school."

She uses real-life variables in her teaching, which has been a plus for students. Students react to Dr. Pilgreen in a very casual manner. Jokes are said by students and laughter is common in her classroom.

Pleased with her selection, were not only Dr. Pilgreen's colleagues, but also her students. Her students expressed nothing but praise.

The nice, outgoing personality does not affect what Pilgreen is actually here for. Graduate student, Rachel Neu said, "She's clear and concise, and just makes everything look easy."

At the same time she is "very reasonable, but demands high quality of work," said Alice Ibarra, a graduate student.

Neu said, "She'll bend backwards to help you be successful in any way."

She recalls an instance when Dr. Pilgreen called her at work to see if everything was all right. That day Neu was not doing to well but she, "can't believe she'll take the time to really care."

"She's a wonderful addition to the program. She comes with tremendous background and skill with support from people that you don't usually see," said Dr. Peggy Redman, director of teacher education.

Pilgreen said she feels fortunate to be at La Verne. A married woman, with one daughter, Dr. Pilgreen is quite busy.

"Teaching at the university level is more than a full-time job. There is no way leaving it here, it is constantly on my mind at home."

Besides Dr. Pilgreen's full-time job at ULV, she still works two hours a day at Glendale High School as a consultant.

Heather Morales

In her second year at the University, Janice Pilgreen became a full-time professor of reading and literacy this semester. Originally a journalism major at UCLA, she switched to English because she felt that it gave her an opportunity to teach.

Students rock house with Fun Flicks

by Sandra Archuleta

Senior Pat Samsonas, junior Jeff Pang, senior Paul Hatter, freshmen Kelii Gouveia and senior Andy Moran turned back the beat as they strutted their stuff to the Go Go's "We got the Beat." The Associated Student Federation (ASF) Forum sponsored Fun Flicks, which gave students the opportunity to choreograph their own videos free of charge.

Last Friday, University of La Verne students had the chance to become stars. The Associated Students Federation (ASF) Forum sponsored Fun Flicks. Billed as "Totally Interactive Video," it was a chance for students to make their own music videos from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Student Center.

The event encouraged students to get involved in school activities and to have a little fun as well. Because it was an all-day event, many people participated.

Senior Stefanie Contreras, ASF entertainment/weekend chair, said "No matter what time you have class you can still come in."

Students made music videos by lip synching to popular songs and kept the tapes for free. Students could dress up and also superimpose their faces into pictures also for free.

Fun Flicks was for everyone. With music categories of Christian, Pop, Country, Rock, Rap, Dance, Rhythm & Blues, Funk, Reggae, Oldies and Alternative Rock, just about anything could be done. The most popular music was Pop and Dance. Songs such as "Atomic Dog" by George Clinton and "California Love" by Tupac Shakur, were performed.

"California Love" was performed by sophomore Sergio Paredes and junior Karl Berry.

"At first I didn't know what to expect. I just tried to remember the video, then I got used to it and eventually it all comes back," Paredes said of the experience.

Berry, who was more sure of himself, said, "I like to be the center of attention, so it was natural for me."

Was desire for fame what caused so many to participate in this fun activity?

Lai Malauulu, who was one of a group who performed "The Right Stuff" by the New Kids on the Block, said, "I felt like I was a real New Kid!"

Stranger follows senior to Oaks, causes scare

by Kendra Bridel
Staff Writer

Senior Amy Levy, a chemistry major, said she was followed by a strange man who tried to coerce her into his vehicle last Sunday afternoon.

Levy was in the library when she noticed a man watching her.

"At first I didn't think anything of it. When I left the library, he got in his car and followed me," said Levy.

While she was walking back to the Oaks, the suspect pulled into a nearby parking spot while honking his horn.

"When he pulled into the parking spot he said 'Hey, I think I know you from somewhere. Why don't you get in the car and I'll give you a ride home and we can figure out where we know each other from,'" said Levy.

The suspect persistently tried to get Levy into his car. At one point, he opened his passenger side door for her to get in.

"I was far enough away that he couldn't grab me. I walked away faster and he followed me. Then, I ran up the stairs into the Oaks and made sure all the doors were locked. I called Campus Safety right away," said Levy.

John Lentz, director of public safety and transportation, said, "We need to have the La Verne PD notified. In a situation where students have concern of someone following them, they should call for escort services."

The suspect was driving a late-model Toyota Camry and, according to Levy, is in his thirties with graying brown hair.

"We had a description of the car, but not a license plate. According to the report, he was not forceful," said Lentz.

"Campus Safety came out right away and took a report. They went to the library to try and identify him. They said there's not much they can do. They are going to keep their eye out," said Levy.

"This seems to be one of the first of these things to occur. If it happens again, we will set up meetings in the residence halls and invite students to come together and talk about what to do and what actions to take," said Lentz. "The first thing to do is get a good description of the vehicle and a license plate number. That way we can contact the person and discourage them from doing it in the future."

"It was scary. People make fun of me because I drive to school from the Oaks. The one day I walked to school, this happened. Don't think I'm walking anymore," said Levy.

Blood drive to help save lives

by Erica Aguilar
Editorial Assistant

In effort to help the American Red Cross save lives, the University of La Verne spring blood drive will be held on Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to 2:45 p.m. in the Old Gym.

Sophomore Kenia Magallanes, vice president of Circle K, said, "Our club is based on community service and that is why we help with the blood drive each semester."

Last fall, 60 people signed up for the blood drive and 40 of them donated blood, compared to the 29 who volunteered last year at this time.

"A total of 40 pints of blood was collected in the fall blood drive," said Maureen Pray, licensed vocational nurse.

To be eligible to give blood, donors must be at least 17 years old, weigh 110 pounds and be in good health.

Donors will be permanently deferred if they have had one of the following ailments: hepatitis B, or non-A, non-B hepatitis at any age, a heart attack or chronic heart disease, a malignancy treated by chemothearapy, diabetes that requires the use of insulin or anyone who is at risk for AIDS.

Common reasons for temporary deferral include those who have had an attack of malaria, an epileptic seizure, coronary bypass surgery, surgical removal of cancer or have been treated for syphilis or gonorrhea. People who have been tattooed in the past year or have been pregnant, miscarried, given birth or had an abortion within the past six weeks cannot donate blood, either.

At the time of donation, every donor's vital signs, hemoglobin and medical history will be checked by a nurse in order to ensure safety.

"They test the blood very thoroughly," said Pray.

A very important fact to know is that an estimated 1,500 volunteer donors are needed everyday, because more than 1,000 people use blood daily in Los Angeles and Orange counties.

Blood is essential for patients undergoing surgery and those with tramatic injuries, such as gunshot wounds or bleeding caused by auto accidents.

"Our school blood drives are successful, especially when students bring extra people to donate," Magallanes said.

In a statistic of 100 donors, 85 of them comply O, A, B and AB Positive blood. The remaining 15 have O, A, B and AB Negative blood types.

"Some of the methods we use to get people to sign up are sending out flyers to mailboxes, sending phone messages, publicizing the blood drive in "Spots To Watch," "Newsflash" and on KULV," said Pray.

To participate in the blood drive, students and faculty can call Pray at ext. 4254, or sign up at the Student Center desk. A form of identification will be required at the time of donation.

Campus Safety provides 24-hour service

by Jody P. Bethel
Staff Writer

Whether it is opening car doors, transporting students around, or cracking down on crime, campus security tries to uphold the motto, "Dedicated to your safety."

Campus security is available 24 hours a day, and offers numerous services every day on patrol and in response to calls.

An average day includes a routine patrol of the campus, starting the morning off with unlocking buildings and ending the night with a lock down of all buildings and gates.

With around 10-15 calls per shift, the day has added extras that play a role in how security can assist you.

The calls range from students and faculty who lock themselves out of residence halls, cars, offices or buildings. Security also helps when a car needs a jump start or an individual needs an escort late at night.

Campus security tries to deter crime from happening by making a presence on the campus during routine patrol, but if a minor crime happens to take place on campus, an investigation and report will be done by security.

An agreement is set up with the La Verne police department (LVPD) that if an incident occurs on campus, campus security will handle the initial investigation and then forward the report to the police department.

Summer Herndon

Security staff members Nancy Stark (left), who began working for the University Sunday, and four-year staffer Tom Erickson provide students with an escort service during the day and evening hours. Erickson feels it has been a success and hopes more students will use the service.

Campus security would like students to call them, if in doubt about a situation. If they cannot assist a person, they can send them in the direction they need to go, according to John Lentz, director of campus safety and transportation.

Campus security deals not only with issues of safety and security of the campus, but with transportation and the maintenance of vehicles as well.

Injured or ill students may get a ride to and from resident halls and to and from doctors appointments and the pharmacy.

Transportation also provides rides for field trips for classes and groups, to the child development center and to Ontario Airport.

Students need to make prior arrangements if possible. "A weeks notice would be ideal," said Lentz.

Campus security strives to create a, "safe and secure campus as best as we can," said Lentz.

To be better assisted with problems, students need to be patient when calling security. When the calls go through the radio, there is a two second delay. If speaking too fast, and not waiting for a response, the call may get cut off. The officers only get part of the message, according to Lentz.

Campus security would like to meet more often with students and make them more aware of safety issues.

"As time goes on, we would like to be more involved," said Lentz.

Campus security wants students to know they are available, and " we are here to help them," said Lentz.

To reach campus security, dial ext. 4950, 596-3549, or press the speed dial on most campus pay phones.

Diversity grants open doors for needed funds

•Programs to benefit campus

by Jody P. Bethel
Staff Writer

The distribution of 14 diversity grants to faculty is designed to assist in spreading diversity issues across the University of La Verne community.

The grants were given out after applications were submitted by various departments proposing the natures and outcomes of the programs and the amount needed to fund them.

The diversity grant program is one of three programs funded by the James Irvine Foundation, which has a total of one half a million dollars in funding.

The entire grant will fund research toward the success of first generation students, the faculty diversified grants and minority teaching.

The faculty diversity grants were given $65,000 in funding, $45,000 of which has been granted to diversity programs and the remaining $20,000 for possible future program funding.

After applications were submitted, they went for review before a committee. The committee is made up of Dr. Len Hightower, assistant to the president; Dr. Mary Prieto-Bayard, assistant professor of behavioral science; Dr. Richard Rose, assistant professor of religion and philosophy; Dr. Roger Russell, director of the Counseling Center; and Eric Bishop, assistant professor of journalism. The applicant could ask for any dollar amount they felt they needed to fund their program, but the committee placed a cap on the dollar amount they could be granted at $5,000. The grants ranged between $825 to $5,000.

According to Dr. Hightower, the reason behind capping the total amount was to allow more programs to be funded, so that the money went further.

The faculty receiving the grants are Drs. Rose, Prieto-Bayard, Russell, Deborah Burris-Kitchen, associate professor of behavioral sciences; Al Clark, assistant vice president of academic affairs; Modesto Hevia, associate professor of psychology; Reed Gratz, professor music; David Flaten, professor of theater arts; Valarie Jordan, professor of psychology; Don Hays, professor of education; and Catherine Henley-Erickson, professor of English; Ruth Trotter, associate professor of art; and Carol Morrow.

Dr. Clark proposed funding for purchasing hard to find music and the visiting of cultural centers in the greater Los Angeles area. The music is part of a humanities course.

He proposed a grant of $525 and received $825. The music Dr. Clark is looking for is from India, South East Asia, China, Japan and Latin America.

The music will help "enhance the class," said Dr. Clark.

Other programs proposed range from a wide array of issues and subjects dealing with diversity. Anywhere from the fine arts to religion, the criminal justice system to gerontology, Latin America and even a pilot study on minority students' attitudes toward "help."

Henley-Erickson proposed funding of $1,000, all of which she received to put on a film series on diversity.

The series, "How Does Our Garden Grow? Films About Diversity," will feature one film per month and two films in April. Each film will be followed by a panel discussion of one faculty member, one student and, if possible, one member from outside of the University of La Verne community.

The series began with "Grand Canyon," which had a focus of looking at the '90s and the multi-culture within it.

"Passion Fish" starring Alfre Woodard will be shown next Thursday at 7 p.m. in La Fetra Auditorium

The films Henley-Erickson has chosen in her series will be coordinating with events that are happening on campus, such as Women's History Month, the International Student Celebration and a Latino Arts Festival are just a few.

According to Henley-Erickson, the films are chosen carefully so students can appreciate those different from them.

The programs supported by the grant will make it possible for the faculty involved to work on issues important to them.

"I'm excited about it," said Dr. Hightower.

Scheduled for Cinco de Mayo, May 5, is the Latin Percussion Festival that Dr. Gratz is organizing.

The festival will feature music from the Latin culture and will include well known artists in the music industry.

According to Dr. Gratz, the festival is to bring out the music behind the Latin culture and get the community involved.

According to Dr. Hightower, the issues of diversity and cultural pluralism will remain a point of attention and faculty can share their results with other faculty and the surrounding community.

More students... less service?

As parking spaces get a little more difficult to grab, classrooms get a little more crowded and the lines get a little longer at the Spot, the University has been aggressively recruiting high school students with much success. This year there has been a 46 percent increase in the number of applications filed to attend next year.

Getting a quality education is an invaluable experience. Of those who have chosen to attend ULV and do, it is assumed that one of the factors leading to the decision was the intimate, close knit atmosphere. The small class sizes, the ability to get to know professors and the easy access to student services has played a viable part in considering La Verne as one's college.

While keeping that in mind, it is also important for the University administration to recruit prospective students who have yet to enroll in a college. But with this boost in the enrollment, will the services change at ULV to accommodate these new students? "That is a good question," said Art Stenmo, director of academic advising.

"It is very hard for us to project the impact a higher enrollment will have on student services," he said. "We are looking at ways to improve our services for all students."

Many students are accustomed to having an adviser who is or has also been that students' professor. He added that although that is the optimal situation for the student, many professors have more advisees than others and with a boost in enrollment, this may change.

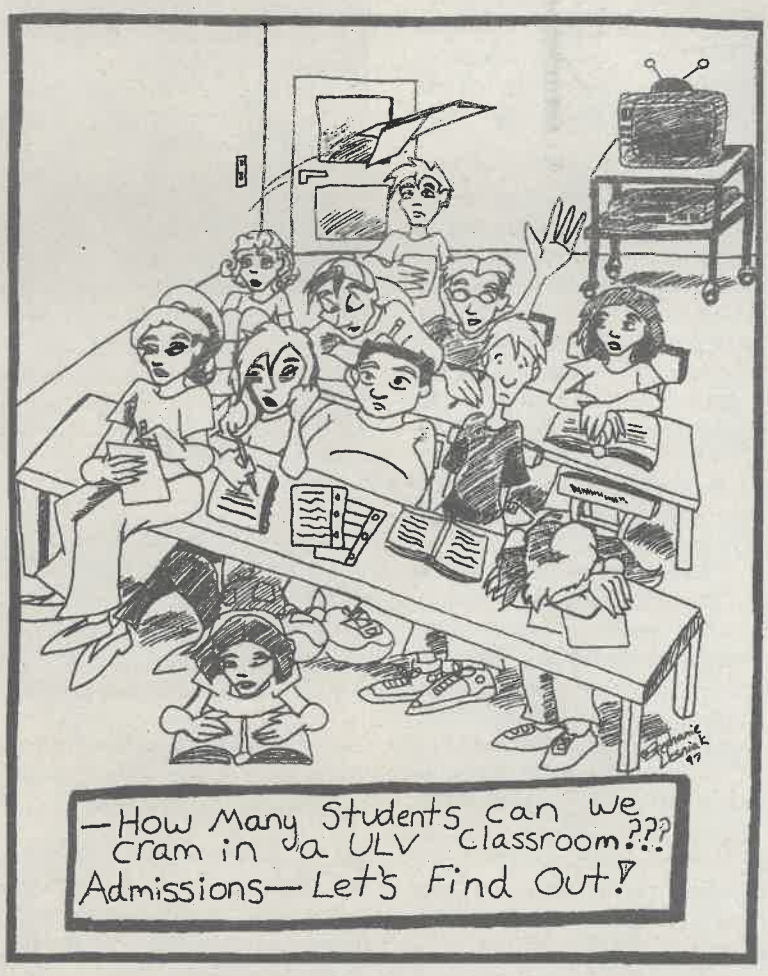

"The University wants to continue to allow students to be advised by professors, but they have to often enlist the help of other administrators to do general advising for undecided students," Stenmo said.

"Academic advising can be a major source of dissatisfaction. You are paying for this. It's like breathing—if it's good, you don't think about it, you expect it. But if you have bad advising, like if you can't breathe, its a major dissatisfaction," said Claudio Muñoz, assistant professor of accounting.

"If I have 10 more students next year, I know that I will put in 10 or more hours for them. I won't take away from their time, I will commit to more time for them," Muñoz added.

The Admissions Office began a new recruiting process, that included telecounseling prospective students, in November 1995. Stenmo said the University is always involved in a campaign to attract students to La Verne. More than 24,000 high school students are attracted to La Verne through the help of advertisements, fairs and direct mail. As of now, the University will admit about 360 incoming freshman and transfer students.

Doug Wible, director of admissions said he would like to see next year's class increase by 15-20 percent, which would be about 30 to 70 students. He said this may be a possibility now that the applicant pool is much larger than usual.

A quality education must be a priority for any student considering a college. While it is important for Admissions to strive for numbers, the quality of services must be considered and cannot be compro-

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I must congratulate you for such a powerful article ["Power is yours" by Raechel Fittante, Feb. 21], and I hope you can help inspire more people in to actually participating on campus. I was discouraged from doing many things on campus because of the apathy and the incompetence of certain important bodies at ULV.

The main problem is the administrative leadership on campus. It's almost as if they benefit more from apathy than from an active student body. I hope one day I see people like Ruby Cordova or Melissa Jaunal actually inspire students to defend their basic rights as students.

Please do keep up with this hot topic. You have my sincere support and admiration.

Dear Editor,

Raechel, I would like to commend you for writing such a tasteful column regarding ASF ["Take a second look," Feb. 28]. I was disappointed when I heard that ASF was putting in an ad in order to retaliate the "cries and complaints" they are having. As a member of the Senior Retreat Committee, I have a big problem accepting that they don't have the funds to help sponsor a senior class tradition. What about "providing for the students" as they preach they do? I don't see it. Nobody wanted Mighty Ducks tickets. Hmm, and what organization ended up buying a large amount of them? A Greek one with many seniors!!! That's nice how they can't pay for seniors to attend [senior retreat], but can spend money on tickets nobody, much less seniors, bought. Well, enough of that, it is evident that ASF has a lot to reconsider if they want to be the "providers" they are. I think that if they put the effort into publicizing how they are so criticized, they should at least have the intention to put some effort into their organization first, instead of attacking you as a journalist and a member of the Campus Times.

Dear Editor,

As a ULV alumnus and former member of ASF and Campus Times, I am writing in response to a few hypocritical statements I read in the Feb. 28 edition.

Let me start by stating that the Campus Times is doing a great job. I am writing in response to the half-page ad by the ASF Forum in response to columns by Ms. Fittante ["Power is yours," Feb. 21] and Ms. Avelar [Seniors must pay for memories," Feb. 21]. It is not fair of me to attack the Forum as a whole, so I would like to address it to whomever wrote the ad. True, the senior retreat is never fully funded by ASF, but there should be some consistency on how much ASF allocates for the retreat. The ad complained about the lack of letters and support to get more funds. Why should students bother? The ad stated that the Office of Student Life has received $3,800 from ASF, and "more money would not be prudent." Could there be a better way to budget the money so students get full use of the $90 they pay each year to ASF?

There was also a statement asking how underclassman would feel about paying for 30 seniors to go on a retreat to reminisce about the last four years. The underclassman I spoke to felt it was okay, because they too would like to have a retreat. Instead of wondering how the underclassman feel, they should be asked how they feel about funding an ASF retreat to Disneyland, that an overwhelming majority of underclassman will not be allowed to participate in, or spending $180 to take out a half-page ad to heal the bruised egos of a select few.

Cory Cruz ('96)

Dear Editor,

Is anyone keeping score? I am an active alumna of ULV and, much to my disbelief, the Campus Times and ASF are still at it! The CT continues to blame ASF for everything, and ASF is still running around picking up the pieces of bad press. And you wonder why students run unopposed in elections? I don't agree with your opinion that the money ASF spent to run an ad rebutting your claims was a waste of students' money. ASF needs to keep the students informed of the facts, not allowing them to be swayed by possibly biased opinions. I do commend you on your thoughts of student power in the Feb. 21 issue ["Power is yours" by Raechel Fittante], though I hope for your sake they aren't as apathetic as you claim. Go to an ASF meeting. Voice your opinions. The student body is lucky to have as strong a voice as ASF is. Were you aware that you have one of the only Boards of Trustees to allow a student to be present at meetings and have a voice? Did you know that members of ASF meet regularly with the president and deans to voice students' concerns? If you have a problem with the way ULV is managed: stop the gossip and bickering, go to ASF, and propose a solution. I am willing to give you my personal guarantee that ASF will have an open ear and willingness to help.

Police need more credit

Raechel Fittante

If you did not see it first-hand on television Friday, than you have probably seen the many clips that have been rerun since then. No one will soon forget the image of two heavily armed individuals spraying the street outside the Bank of America in North Hollywood with gunfire. Nor will anyone forget the sound it made; the rolling machine guns followed by the stagnant echo of the lone bullets shot from the guns of police on the scene.

Not only were police officers and civilians wounded by these highly professional bank robbers who drove the same car to rob the Hollywood bank that they have driven to rob previous banks, but Los Angeles was made to realize that even the shotguns and bullet-proof vests used by police in emergency situations are no match for the semi-automatic weapons that criminals have continuous access to.

Anyone who saw the scene unfold as it happened live most likely saw the fear on the faces of the police officers as the gunfire continued, and witnessed the wounding of innocent victims who fell into the line of fire.

Miraculously, no one was killed except the two who waged the war, catching an entire city off-guard with their violent attempts to take some cops down with them. It was quite obvious both of them had a pact to go all the way with their crimes, which ranged from armed robbery to attempted murder. They would have rather died than go to jail.

However, 11 cops and six civilians were wounded and although the injuries ranged in seriousness, it is alarming how much damage two people can do when they catch a city off-guard with that extreme caliber of ammunition in their possession.

The truth is the officers of the Los Angeles Police Department were not prepared for the mini-massacre that occurred, and they will continue to remain unprepared unless they become equipped with weapons equivalent to the AK-47's that Larry Philips and Emil Matasareanu used on Friday.

Although there were more cops than gunmen in that particular situation, the police officers were outgunned and their lives placed in serious jeopardy; so serious that a few officers had to acquire weapons from a neighborhood gun shop in order to retaliate more effectively.

And to think, it was the LAPD, under main directions of Scott La Chasse, the No. 2 LAPD leader in the Valley, who organized the whole effort to pull the city together on all ends, from the media situation, police operations, planning and intelligence, tactics, investigation, traffic and medical response, as well as rescue efforts for the wounded.

On that afternoon, the officers of the LAPD reminded the world of the difficulty and precision necessary in being an officer of the law, especially in a city as difficult to maintain as L.A. They executed their jobs tremendously, regardless of the intensity and the risks involved with the spontaneous outpour of bullets aimed at them and anyone else who happened to be in the general vicinity.

Anyone watching would agree, the police officers were the heroes of the day.

But what about every day? Police officers, especially LAPD officers, get such a bad rap for all the things the public deems as possible wrongdoing. However, it seems that nine times out of 10, they are just doing their jobs to the best of their capacities. There are instances of poor conduct by police, which are usually brought to the public eye and criticized to no end, but there are many more instances of good things police officers do that they do not get credit for.

Think about it—who do you call when your house is getting broken in to? Who do you call when your neighbor is beating the hell out of his wife on the front lawn? Who do you call when riots break out in the school or in the heart of the city? Without police officers, there would be total chaos.

So the next time you call a cop a "pig" or speak against them about some fabricated conspiracy theory, remember their actions of bravery last Friday and the tears shed by officers for fear of their wounded partners' lives. Remember, the battle they fought last week is not unlike the ones they fight every day.

Gym floor unacceptable

Laura Czingula

As an athlete on the women's basketball team, I have come to realize one very disturbing aspect about this school, the floor upstairs in the Student Center.

We who use the gym regularly know exactly what this is about, but for those of you who do not, an explanation is needed.

The so-called gym floor we have in our facilities is probably one of the worst floors I have ever played on in my life and I have been playing basketball for 10 years.

Most gym floors are made up of hardwood and lacquer, but not ULV's floor. It is made up of rubber with a plastic wrap. I need not mention that half the plastic is tearing off at this very moment.

Basketball courts should be nice and shiny with boarded wood, not one big rubber square with some plastic on top of it, so when you run down the court you almost trip over the plastic that is tearing away.

ULV's court is absurd and I know many athletes who agree with me. I have even heard talk that the men's volleyball team would prefer to use the Old Gym once in a while because the gym in the Supertents is just so bad.

Is this what it has come to? Going down into the smaller, colder, dirty, dustier, old gym, because despite all the things wrong with that gym too, it is still better than the gym upstairs.

La Verne is known for its wonderful atmosphere, unique buildings, and beautiful grounds. This is all true, ULV is a beautiful school with the exception of that ugly old green floor we call our basketball court.

Every other sport at La Verne has great places to compete, and they should because they deserve them, but why not now try to improve the Student Center gym. This would be not just for men and women's basketball, but men and women's volleyball, some physical education classes and other school activities such as intramural basketball.

La Verne students are paying for their own education of $14,460, which does not include anything but the actual tuition. With about 1,000 undergraduate students going to ULV and paying that much money, you would think a new floor plan for the gym could at least be talked about for the future. It would not only be for the athletes at La Verne right now who have to play on the unacceptable court, but also for the future athletes of La Verne.

I am not asking for much. I could go on and explain how it sucks to play in that gym for other reasons like the lighting, air conditioning and heater, the smell of the Spot at dinner time during practice and the annoying sound of the cheerleaders practicing their routines over and over and over again, not to mention the sororities chanting their names so loud the tents are shaking, but I will not.

Also, a number of injuries have occurred in that gym, especially this year. All kinds of injuries to ankles, backs and knees. Some of the injuries have led to surgery (including my own), therapy, time off, red shirting and just hours and hours in the training room. The women's basketball team alone had five different players injured this year in the Supertents, which lead to them missing at least one or more games.

All I am saying is that a new gym floor would probably cost around 20 students' tuition. This may seem like a high number, but the benefits would be worth it.

It would not only help out athletes playing on the court, but it would also help boost enrollment just a little, and is not that what the University wants?

The school distributes its money any which way it chooses, so why not scoop a little toward the reconstruction of a new floor.

Your best friend is you

Erica Aguilar

It is another Tuesday morning in this demanding world we live in. I wake up to the annoying beep of an alarm clock, push the snooze button as fast as I can to turn it off and pull the blankets completely over my head, knowing that I have four morning classes, work and editing to do for the newspaper until 6 p.m. I mean, let's be realistic. How many people actually turn off their alarms and jump right out of bed? There are probably few on the list.

Why do we have such a hard time getting out of bed four to five times out of the week? It is true that some people have it worse than others. Sometimes, students do not get out of bed to go to any of their classes. When this ugly cycle becomes a habit, one eventually admits to his or her self that there is a problem.

The problem is evident. I do not want to go to class because I obviously do not want to be in school at this present time in my life, even though I was not here last semester because of financial aid. It has nothing to do with not learning, because education is very important to me. Maybe, just maybe, is it this institution and the people who compose it that are bringing me down?

Of course all people have to face other everyday who are not necessarily their favorites. With all the rumors flying around this campus daily, they wonder whom they can really trust, even among the people who they think are their friends. By the end of an exhausting day, one realizes that there is only one person who will not hurt them, someone they can trust, no matter what. That person is yourself.

Building relationships is hard. It is a hard lesson in determining who one's friends are and who the acquaintances are. It is the subtle betrayals of "friends" that hurt the most. Betrayal can be when a friend reveals one's secrets to someone else, or even deserting a friend, especially in a time of need. One of the hardest ingredients to add to a friendship is trust, and without it, one cannot possibly have good, healthy relationships.

Each and every relationship is unique and different. One builds friendships and chooses to leave old, tainted relationships behind, usually because of dishonesty and betrayal. Dwelling on the past will not get anyone anywhere in this life, nor will staying in bed every morning. People must defeat the system before it defeats them.

Nobody in this world is a failure unless he or she gives up on life itself. The support is there. Whether it is a sorority sister writing you a letter, a teammate giving you a high-five or a good friend buying you lunch, there are people that care about you. Amazingly, they sometimes care about you too much to ever think about hurting you. That is when one finds out who "real friends" are. A true friend will always be there in times of need, desperation and heartache. If you do not want to believe this, think to yourself (as Bette Midler sings) "I still got my health, why should I care?"

A final thought is to find new ways to encourage and motivate yourself. Go out of your way to say "hi" to someone you would like to know better, continue to get involved in school because there are organizations for everyone to be welcomed into—you just have to find the right one—and always, always smile at the people you dislike most. They will dislike you even more, but you will conquer them by having the last laugh.

If you can wake up every morning and look at yourself in the mirror without laughing or crying, that should be enough to get you through life every day. If you know who you are, you can tackle any problem, and believe me, there will come a day when you will jump right out of bed.

March marks Women's History Month

by Araceli Esparza
Staff Writer

Throughout the month of March, University of La Verne sororities Phi Sigma Sigma, Sigma Kappa and Iota Delta will work together to present National Women's History Month to the ULV community.

The month is dedicated to women as a means of helping others understand the role and contributions of the female gender in today's society.

"This month will give us the opportunity to celebrate women everyday," said Wendy Lau, philanthropy chair of Phi Sigma Sigma. "We need to learn to appreciate them as people, and the preparations for this month seem like a good start."

Activities during the month will include guest speakers, video presentations, distribution of informative pamphlets, personal awareness quizzes and women's issues.

Senior Tammy Abedo, coordinator for Women's History Month, suggested the participation of all three sororities for one important reason.

"I chose to ask all the sororities to get involved because we are all women dealing with the same issues. This is also a good chance for people, as well as the community, to see the positive parts of a sorority," Abedo said. "Many people do not see sororities as a group of people who do positive things. People don't recognize us for the contributions we make in the community."

The first of the three-week series for National Women's History Month, sponsored by Phi Sigma Sigma, began Monday and will conclude today with guest speaker Maria Ayala, an employee for the YWCA WINGS (Women In Need Growing Strong) Battered Women's Shelter.

The topic of her speech, "How Do I Know I'm in a Healthy Relationship?" will focus on women who are victims of abusive relationships. The speech will take place from 12 to 1 p.m. in the President's Dining Room.

Phi Sigma Sigma proved just that, as statistics showed that one out of every two women in America has been battered. Throughout the campus, additional information and facts in consideration of this issue are also displayed.

In continuation of this three-part series, Sigma Kappa will present "Get Real," a discussion of women's health and wellness, next Thursday at 5 p.m. in La Fetra Hall.

Among the activities planned for health awareness week, the distribution of pamphlets concerning health issues and sample quizzes testing personal health awareness are included.

Women's health issues dealing with depression, rape, eating disorders, breast cancer and drug and alcohol abuse will also be discussed throughout the week.

In addition to the presentation of videos and speakers, members of Sigma Kappa will set up a booth to give out safety pins and beads to ULV students.

"The beads given out will be used to represent the various issues women deal with today. Hopefully, people will realize that these issues can also affect them. They may not always happen to other people," said Dyane Galindo, corresponding secretary for Sigma Kappa.

For the women of Sigma Kappa, these issues are not only informative for themselves and others, they are realistic.

In 1993, Kelly Salamone, a member of Sigma Kappa, was killed by a drunk driver.

"During National Women's History Month, the sorority will be holding a special ceremony in remembrance of Kelly. We hope her life can help people understand the truth about alcohol abuse, and be aware that this issue hits close to home," Galindo said.

Concluding the three-week series is Iota Delta, whose primary focus will be on topics concerning issues of gender in today's society.

With the presentation of "Man, Oh Man" and "Dear Lisa: A Letter to My Sister," students will have the chance to discuss controversies of gender which were present in the past and are still present today.

"Women today are scared to be feminine," said Shannon McCrea, member of Iota Delta. "Feminism is about expecting equal treatment. As women, we should not let people take it away from us. These films can help women recognize their role in society, and not be afraid to want equality."

The sorority has also invited a panel of speakers to join students in a discussion session following the film. Although a specific date has not yet been set for this event, it will take place early in the week of March 17.

The celebration will end March 21 and all students, male or female, are invited to attend and participate in all activities.

Cardio-kickboxing kicks off new fitness trend

by Kendra Bridel
Staff Writer

Cardio-kickboxing, the new trend in fitness, is a way to get the body in shape for the spring season. It is an intense workout that combines low impact conditioning with controlled boxing and kicking routines.

Cardio-kickboxing develops self awareness, self confidence, reduces stress and improves strength and muscle tone. It increases flexibility and coordination, burns fat, builds muscle and creates something exciting and new for people who are bored with traditional aerobics.

Henry DeCambra, aerobic coordinator for L.A. Fitness in Diamond Bar, said, "Cardio kickboxing incorporates traditional boxing and martial art punch and kick movements to high energy music for a full body workout that firms and tones while burning lots of fat."

Punching moves include the basic jabs, cross punches, upper cuts and hook punches. Kickboxing moves include front kicks, back kicks, side kicks, roundhouse kicks and crescent kicks.

In order to properly execute these moves the knees and elbows must be soft or slightly bent.

The normal class length is about 60 minutes which starts with an active warm up and stretch, followed by a cardiovascular strengthening or technique section which can last up to 45 minutes. The toning and abdominal section close the workout before the finishing cool down stretches.

"I feel that the addition of the new cardio kick format will greatly increase the diversity of our aerobic classes while offering a universal appeal to those men and women as a fun alternative to traditional impact and step classes," said DeCambra.

There are several different types of boxing and kickboxing programs coming to L.A. Fitness locations all over.

Club boxing teaches its participants proper boxing techniques and skills with the use of wraps, gloves and bags. These protect your hands and feet from being injured.

The knockout workout is a combination of interval drills that include boxing, jump roping, athletic drills and muscle conditioning designed to increase cardiovascular fitness and muscular endurance.

Exercising at least three times a week will give the quickest results. Rotating different aerobics classes and exercises is beneficial for a total body workout.

If people are not interested in cardio-kickboxing as a fitness method, it can also be used to learn more about your body and how to protect yourself in the process.

Currently, there is a cardio-kickboxing class at the L.A. Fitness in Diamond Bar at 7 p.m. on Tuesday evenings.

For more information, call (909) 860-2774.

Senior project focuses on exercise

by Katrina Hall
Staff Writer

Senior Guillermo Escalante has taken on women's fitness as the research topic for his senior project.

Escalante is a physical education major with an emphasis in athletic training and a biology minor.

The project, which started on Feb. 5, will end March 21.

Three hundred letters were sent out to female students and 15 were chosen randomly to do the experiment. They had to be between the ages of 18 and 23.

According to Escalante, the project is broken down into two components. They are aerobic capacity and body composition or body fat.

Aerobic capacity deals with the cardiovascular level of how much impact the body can take and body fat, which is tested with plastic tongs, tells how much fat is in the thighs, waist and triceps.

After gathering weight, height and age, there is a calculation of the percentage of how much body fat is in the body. The project consists of a pre-test and a post-test.

"For the pre-test, I chose three groups of five subjects randomly," said Escalante. "The first group does a series of the exercise from a fitness video, the second group does exercise designed and instructed by myself and the third group is the control group."

What Escalante is trying to see is how effective the video is compared to his personally designed exercise program.

Escalante's program consists of using the tread mill, exercise bike, Stairmaster and free weights.

"Both exercise programs are designed to improve cardiovascular and body composition," Escalante said.

Sophomore Brandi Baumeister, who is exercising in Escalante's senior project said "I work out regularly, so for me, this is more of an opportunity to tone my whole body, opposed to just running. I've learned that not just working out the legs is important, but the whole body."

He chose "The Firm Video" for the first group because it has been ranked first among six national fitness magazines and made millions of dollars.

"My hypothesis is that my exercise will prove to be more effective in the two components (aerobic capacity and body fat)," Escalante said.

The A and B groups exercise twice a week, one hour each day. The first group will do everything the instructor does on the video and the second group will do the exercises Escalante instructs. The third group does not exercise.

"At the end of the six week program, I will see how the first and second group compare in body fat and aerobic capacity," said Escalante. "I will see if there is a statistically seen difference between both groups."

Junior Katie O'Neil, who is also exercising, said the project has taught her a lot about how to use exercise equipment and how much activity is appropriate for her body. She hopes to continue exercising after the project is over.

The control group is not tested because Escalante is trying to see if women lose body fat even if they do not exercise.

He will conclude the project with a five-chapter paper starting with an introduction, then a review of literature and methodology. The other two chapters to be covered are a presentation of the results, recommendations and a summary.

According to Jim Paschal, physical education professor, the project is worth 75 percent of the senior project class grade.

Paschal says the students completing the senior seminar class are required to write a scholarly paper, develop a master thesis and present it before the P.E. faculty members as well as their peers.

The son of Manuel Escalante, professor of international marketing, Guillermo considers himself a versatile yet ambitious man. He was a competitive athlete in track and field during his freshman year and played football this past season, but suffered a knee injury.

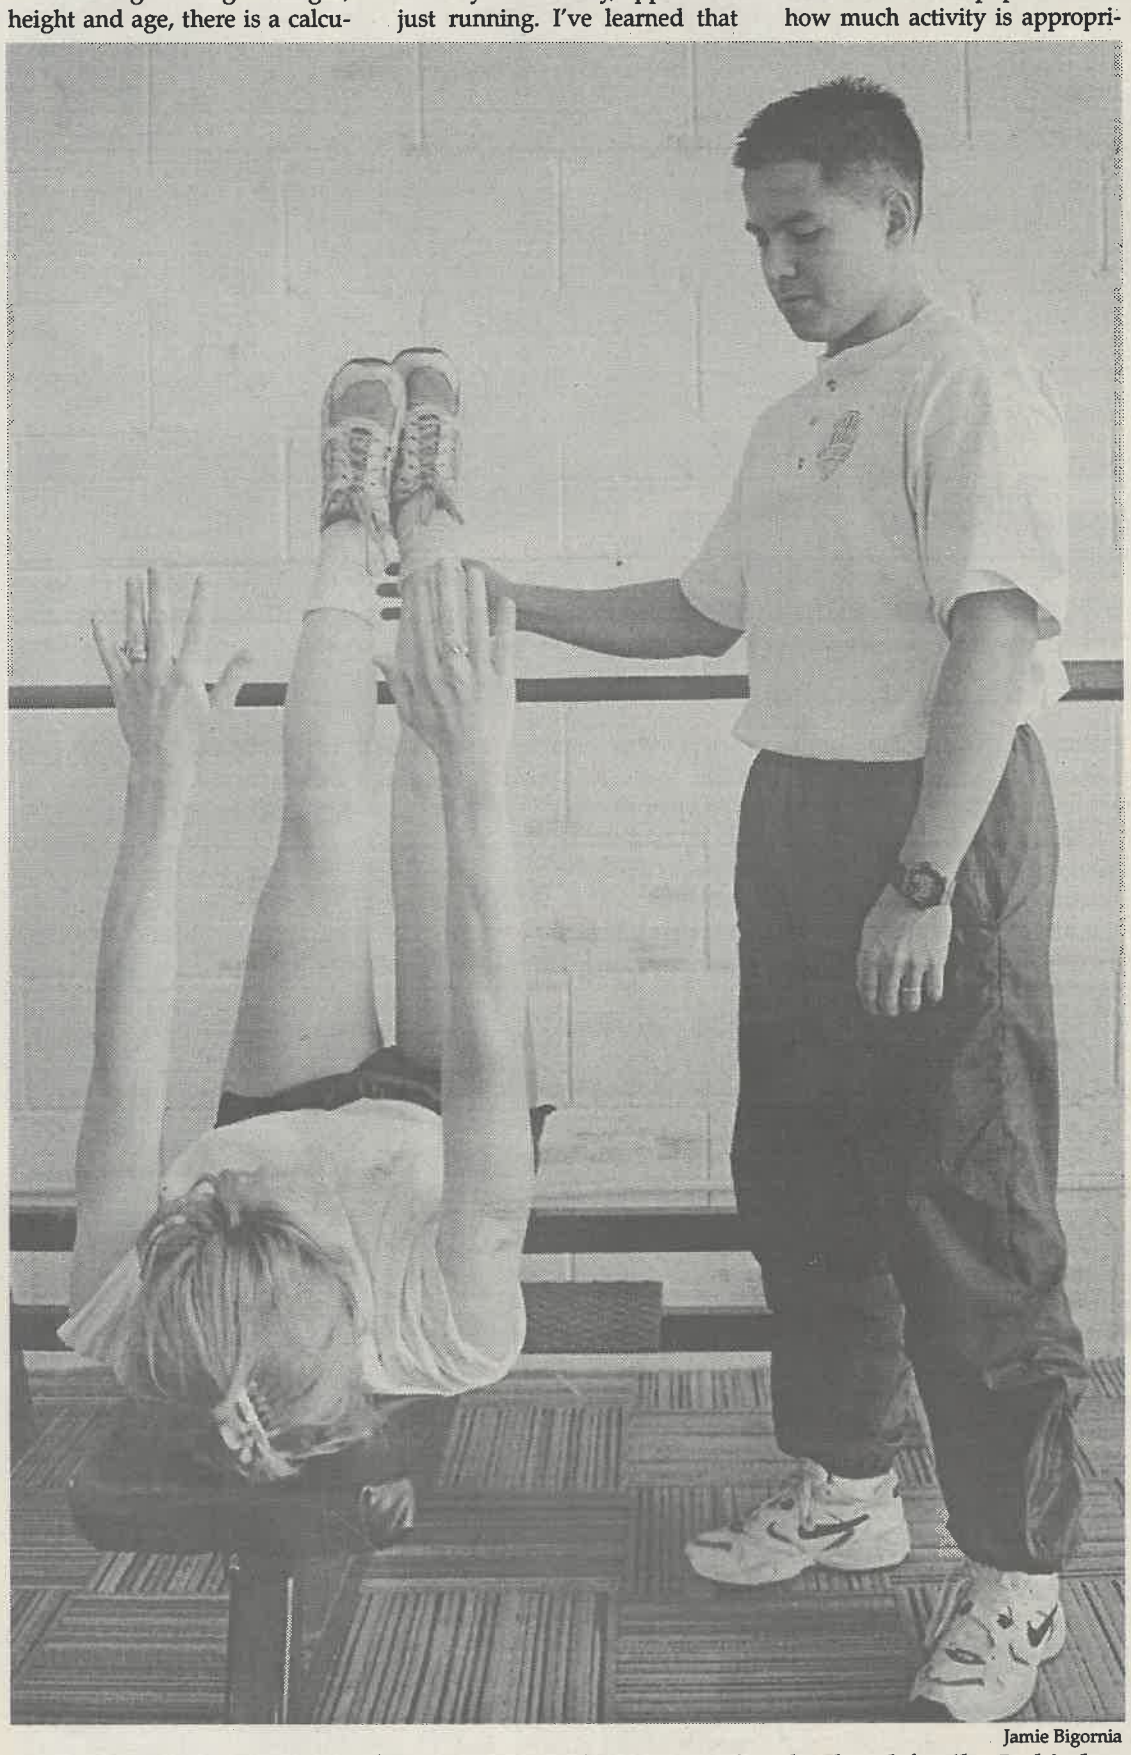

Escalante is also the proud father of 17-month-old Nathan and husband of 22 months to Stephanie, 23.

In addition to his class load of 16 units, he is an assistant in the University of La Verne physiology lab under the direction of Dr. Terry Lepper, lab director and veterinarian.

Escalante is also head student athletic trainer for the men's basketball team, a personal trainer and will work as an athletic trainer for spring sports.

He is also in the process of applying to medical school. The schools he hopes to be accepted to are UC Davis and Johns Hopkins Medical School in Maryland, for the fall of 1997. He will also start classes for a masters of business administration in April of this year.

"It is essential to have a business background to survive in the medical field today," he said.

Jamie Bigornia

Senior Guillermo Escalante manages his time between work, school and family. In his last semester as a physical education major, Escalante is developing a program to aid women in weight loss and muscle toning. Demonstrating an exercise to sophomore Brandi Baumeister, Escalante also works as a private trainer at a fitness club in Sherman Oaks. Ultimately, he plans to pursue a master's degree and become an orthopedic surgeon.

Fukuya delivers taste of Japan to La Verne

by Aaron Kiel

photography by Amy M. Boyle

Ted Sakata, manager and sushi chef at Fukuya Sushi in La Verne demonstrates the skill necessary for the presentation of the exotic foods enjoyed by many people every day. Fukuya Sushi is open daily from 11:30-2 p.m. for lunch, and 5-9 p.m. for dinner.

Spicy octopus, gyoza (fried dumplings), squid, tempura, yakitori (chicken on skewers) and sashimi (sliced raw fish), are just a few of the dishes served at Fukuya Sushi Bar in La Verne, where quality food, friendly service and affordable dining make for an exotic lunch or dinner.

"There's a lot of cultural foods that are totally different. That's what attracts people to it. Anybody can go to the corner and buy a Big Mac or Whopper," said Ted Sakata, manager and sushi chef at Fukuya.

From the sushi bar, one can try assorted cut rolls, sashimi and hand rolls. Hand rolls are rice, fish and vegetables rolled in seaweed like an ice cream cone, while a cut roll is the more popular version of sushi in America—the sushi is rolled tightly with bamboo and cut into slices.

Fukuya's variety of sushi includes mackerel, which is a little oily and leaves a fishy aftertaste, scallops, salmon, yellowtail, crab, shrimp and tuna.

The tuna, which is a deep red, is recommended for those who have never tried sushi before. Tuna is soft, not rubbery like octopus, and does not leave an aftertaste like mackerel.

For those who are a little squeamish about eating sushi, the California roll—filled with crab, avocado and cucumber—is the best way to experience a sushi bar without the raw fish.

After each serving of sushi, pickled ginger is traditionally used to clean the palate before trying the next item.

A green paste called wasabi, or Japanese horseradish, is used for dipping. It is best to mix only a small amount of wasabi with some shoyu, or soy sauce, to sample its strong flavor.

Sakata, who has been training in sushi preparation for three years, said raw fish is an aphrodisiac.

"I joke around with customers. Especially when they are on their first date or something. I'll joke around and say, 'Be careful. We're not held responsible for anything that happens outside of the store,'" said Sakata about the aphrodisiac myth.

> 'You make a lot of friends at a sushi bar.'
> —George Stone, La Verne resident

While the sushi at Fukuya is tasty and the food is presented in a colorful manner with broccoli, strawberries and lemon as garnish, the best dish—which is entirely cooked—is called Dynamite, consisting of scallops, mushrooms and onions sauteed with garlic and pepper, stuffed in an oyster shell and smothered with spicy mayonnaise and fish eggs. This is the house speciality and one should not pass it up.

Chicken and beef entrées are also available, like the teriyaki yakitori and beef, Japanese fried chicken—that tastes and looks like buffalo wings—fried dumplings and shrimp tempura (the tempura dipping sauce is highly recommended).

La Verne resident George Stone has been eating at Fukuya for five of the six years the restaurant has been owned by Shin Murkama.

"These guys have pride in their food. I have never had bad fish here. It is always good," said Stone, who enjoys visiting with the Itamae-San, or sushi chef, at one of the stools at the bar.

"You make a lot of friends at a sushi bar," said Stone.

Fukuya is a friendly restaurant where the employees are willing to teach new customers about sushi.

Sakata said it is his job to know what tastes people like and what they do not like when eating sushi.

"You can tell by the person's expression," said Sakata.

Prices range from $5.95 and up, but the best deal is on Sundays and Mondays from 5-9 p.m. for all-you-can-eat and drink. The cost is $25 and guests can drink all the saki, beer and wine they wish for up to 90 minutes, plus sample different sushi and kitchen items.

The restaurant is open seven days a week from 11:30 a.m.-2 p.m. for lunch and 5-9 p.m. for dinner and seats 38 people. Reservations are not required.

Fukuya is located in the Stater Bros. shopping center at 2084-C Foothill Blvd, on the corner of Foothill and "D" Street.

'Breakfast at Tiffany's' revisited

by Heather Morales
Staff Writer

Perhaps one of the most underrated films of its time, "Breakfast at Tiffany's" brought the highly spirited Truman Capote character, Holly Golightly, to life on the movie screen.

Although the film is based on the Capote novella of the same name and keeps the same lighthearted theme, the plot to "Breakfast at Tiffany's" differs from the book by changing some of the themes for a film audience.

First released in 1961, the film met high critical acclaim, but it was hardly a big hit at the box office.

The film portrays the life of a New York City "party girl," Holly, of the early '60s. It was rumored at the time that Capote wrote the book with Marilyn Monroe in mind as Holly, so when director Blake Edwards ("10," "Victor/ Victoria") cast Audrey Hepburn as Holly, it was a test to Hepburn's talent.

The role was a stretch for Hepburn as she was an extremely introverted person and Holly personified "outgoing."

In "Audrey Hepburn: An Intimate Portrait" she said of the role of Holly Golightly, "I was nothing like her, but I felt I could 'act' Holly...I knew the part would be a challenge, but I wanted it anyway."

It was a direction that Hepburn had never taken in her film roles. She made her debut as an innocent girl in "Roman Holiday" and played the lead in the original version of "Sabrina."

George Peppard was cast opposite Hepburn as Holly's new neighbor and friend, Paul Varjack, who helps Holly overcome some of her fears of ending up alone. Micky Rooney adds some comedy to the film as his portrayal of Mr. Yunioshi, the landlord, annoyed by all of the noise coming from Holly's apartment.

Holly is the girl everyone wants to be: carefree, outgoing and doing whatever she wants whenever she wants. She describes herself by saying, "I'm used to being the top banana in the shock department."

Holly lives her life to be the girl that everybody wants to know, the one that people envy. She knows everyone and everyone knows her. She keeps her apartment modestly furnished with the bare essentials, her refrigerator stocked with cottage cheese and she wears little black dresses.

She affords all of this by accepting $50 "donations" from her dates to go to the powder room and she also receives a "salary" by visiting gangster Sally Tomato at Sing Sing prison and delivering the "weather report" to Tomato's lawyer.

Holly is a character who is sure of herself on the outside but very insecure on the inside, and it was Hepburn's own insecurities about herself that made the audience believe that Holly's emotions were real.

The first scene where Holly and Paul meet, Holly tells Paul about why Tiffany and Co., the jewelry store, has a calming effect on her and one is able to catch a glimpse into Holly's mind.

"The 'blues' are because you are getting fat or maybe it's been raining too long. You're just sad, that's all. The 'Mean Reds' are horrible. Suddenly you're afraid, and you don't even know what you're afraid of.

Did you ever get that feeling?...Well, when I get it, the only thing that does any good is to jump into a cab and go to Tiffany's. Calms me down right away. The quietness and the proud look of it. Nothing very bad can happen to you there."

Peppard delivers a barely passable role as Paul in which the most emotion we see from him is at the end of the film as Holly is running away from everything.

"Do you know what's wrong with you, Miss Whoever-You-Are?" he says. "You're chicken. You got no guts...You call yourself a free spirit, a wild thing, and you're terrified somebody's going to stick you in a cage.

Well, baby, you're already in that cage... It's wherever you go because no matter where you run, you just end up running into yourself."

The critical acclaim came from Hepburn's portrayal of Holly and Edward's ability to bring the comedy of the film together with the seriousness of it and to make them work together on the screen.

The musical theme to "Breakfast at Tiffany's" also won critical acclaim. "Moon River" won the Academy Award in 1961 for best song and composer Henry Mancini won for the best score for a drama or comedy.

Places to break for spring

by Kendra Bridel
Staff Writer

Students travel great distances in order to show themselves a great time for spring break. However, this year, some students are keeping their trips local, while others are branching out.

The traditional hot spots for local college students are Lake Havasu, Ariz., Laughlin, Nev., Mexico and San Diego.

Andy Kowal, an agent for La Verne Travel, said, "A lot of people are going to Lake Havasu. Unfortunately, people can't fly there unless they go to Phoenix, Ariz., and drive from there."

> —Pat Macias, senior

Senior Pat Macias, behavioral science major, said, "My fraternity brothers and I are going to Crazy Horse camp site in Lake Havasu. A lot of people go there; it is affordable and it will help our fraternity get closer."

Some students are being more cost conscious this year. Some believe that camping at Lake Havasu will save them money in the end.

"I'd rather spend $300 on beer than a hotel room," said Macias.

Jim Daniels, manager of La Verne Travel, said, "Most people are calling to buy tickets to go home and see their folks. I don't think we have had a lot of requests for just one place. It is a pretty wide range."

Some people have called Daniels requesting information on travelling to the Napa Valley, Hawaii and Cancun, Mexico and some students were inquiring on trips to Florida where they could join their friends from other colleges for the break.

"A lot of people can't afford to go anywhere and are just staying home," said Daniels.

Depending on the different destinations, prices range anywhere from hundreds to thousands of dollars.

"Some people pay $800 per person and some people wish to stay in a five star resort and pay $1000 per person. Some fly first class and some people fly coach. Different people pay all different rates," said Daniels.

Junior Milo Epling, history and physical education major, is going to Lake Havasu and Ensenada, Mexico.

"The majority of the people I hang out with are going there," said Epling. "I'm going there to party and jet ski."

Freshman Mike Barreiro, physical education major, is going to Lake Havasu.

"I heard it goes off," he said.

Sophomore Kelly McFarland, sociology major, said, "I'm going to Puerto Vallarta with my boyfriend and his family. I want to sit back, drink, relax and get away from the pressures of school," said McFarland.

"I'm going to the [Colorado] River with my roommate because it is the main attraction for spring break," said Isa Lose, a freshman music major.

One of the popular attractions in Lake Havasu and Lake Mead is renting houseboats. Most houseboats hold eight to 12 people.

"We do very little of the houseboat rentals for Lake Mead and Lake Havasu. Seven Crown resorts deals with people one on one," said Daniels.

Junior Nancy de los Cobos, physical education major, is planning on going to San Felipe for the first half of her spring break and to Lake Havasu for the second half.

"I chose those places because I want the most party for my money. It's going to be non-stop partying," said de los Cobos.

Senior Andrew Phillips, English major, said, "I'm going to the strip in San Diego and possibly Rosarito."

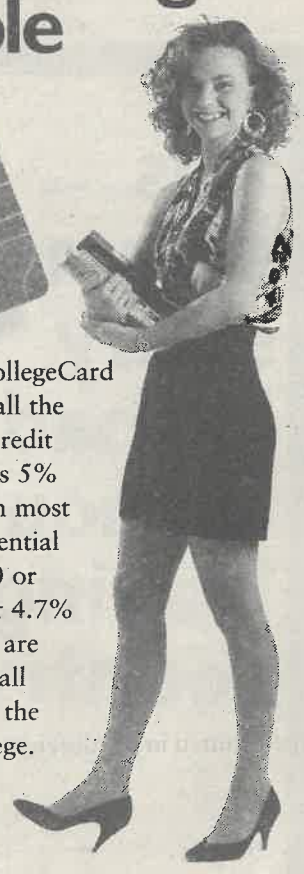

Sophomore Armando Hernandez, a diversified major, said, "I'm going to Mazatlan. Some of my friends are going. I just want to go party and meet people from other colleges."

Maui "the god of a thousand tricks," has special rates for the spring season. For a standard hotel room at the Maui Palms Hotel, it costs $58 and holds up to three people per room. If there is a fourth person the superior room costs $68.

Freshman Morgan Babler, diversified major, said, "I'm going to Maui with my brother and my dad. I want to soak up some sun and drink tropical drinks."

Track places high in league meets

by Greg MacDonald
Staff Writer

In the first of three Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (SCIAC) track meets, the University of La Verne track and field team placed well.

The women's team defeated Pomona-Pitzer by an overall score of 101-44 and Cal Lutheran by a 129-15 margin last Saturday at Ortmayer Stadium.

The men's team defeated Cal Lutheran by a 109-41 score, but lost to Pomona-Pitzer and Redlands. One of the reasons the men did not score as highly against Pomona-Pitzer and Redlands is that they did not have some participants for certain events.

"The women have a more complete team as compared to our men's team. The guys we have did well I thought, " said head coach Pat Widolff.

The men and women dominated the relays. The men's 4x100m relay team of junior Terrell Davis, seniors Jason Neal and Liron Wilson, and sophomore Ordell Williams easily won its race with a first place time of 42.16. The women's team of juniors Dulce Giangrasso and Katrina Hall, senior Stacey Williams and freshman Jemeace Willis also had the first place touch with a time of 51.05 seconds.

Freshmen Maxine Mitchell and Maria Garcia, junior Stephanie Castillo and Willis cruised to a first place finish at a time of 4:10.64 in the women's 4x100m relay.

Senior Bart Evans, junior Anthony Rudolph, Williams and Wilson also won their 4x400m relay with a 3:25.22 time.

"The relay teams aren't always the same week to week, but this week we were pretty healthy," said Widolff.

In the women's 100m event, ULV swept the top three spots with Williams earning the best time, 13.10. Sophomore Tiffany Wilcher finished second with a time of 13.77, and sophomore Lynsey Best came in third with her time of 13.97.

In the men's 100m, the Leopards again took the top three spots. Wilson (11.22) edged out teammate Neal (11.29) to finish first. Davis ran a time of 11.31 to earn the three spot.

The Leopards also featured senior Socorro Gonzalez, throwing two national qualifiers in the women's javelin and the women's shotput. She threw the javelin 134'4" and the shot put 43'4" to earn her spot in the Wisconsin Nationals. The shot put toss also earned Gonzalez a school record.

"We should have a good amount go to the nationals in Wisconsin," Widolff said after Gonzalez qualified for both events.

Another school record was broken by freshman Rhiannon Jenson in the hammer. She landed the hammer 112'4" from where she threw it to break the record.

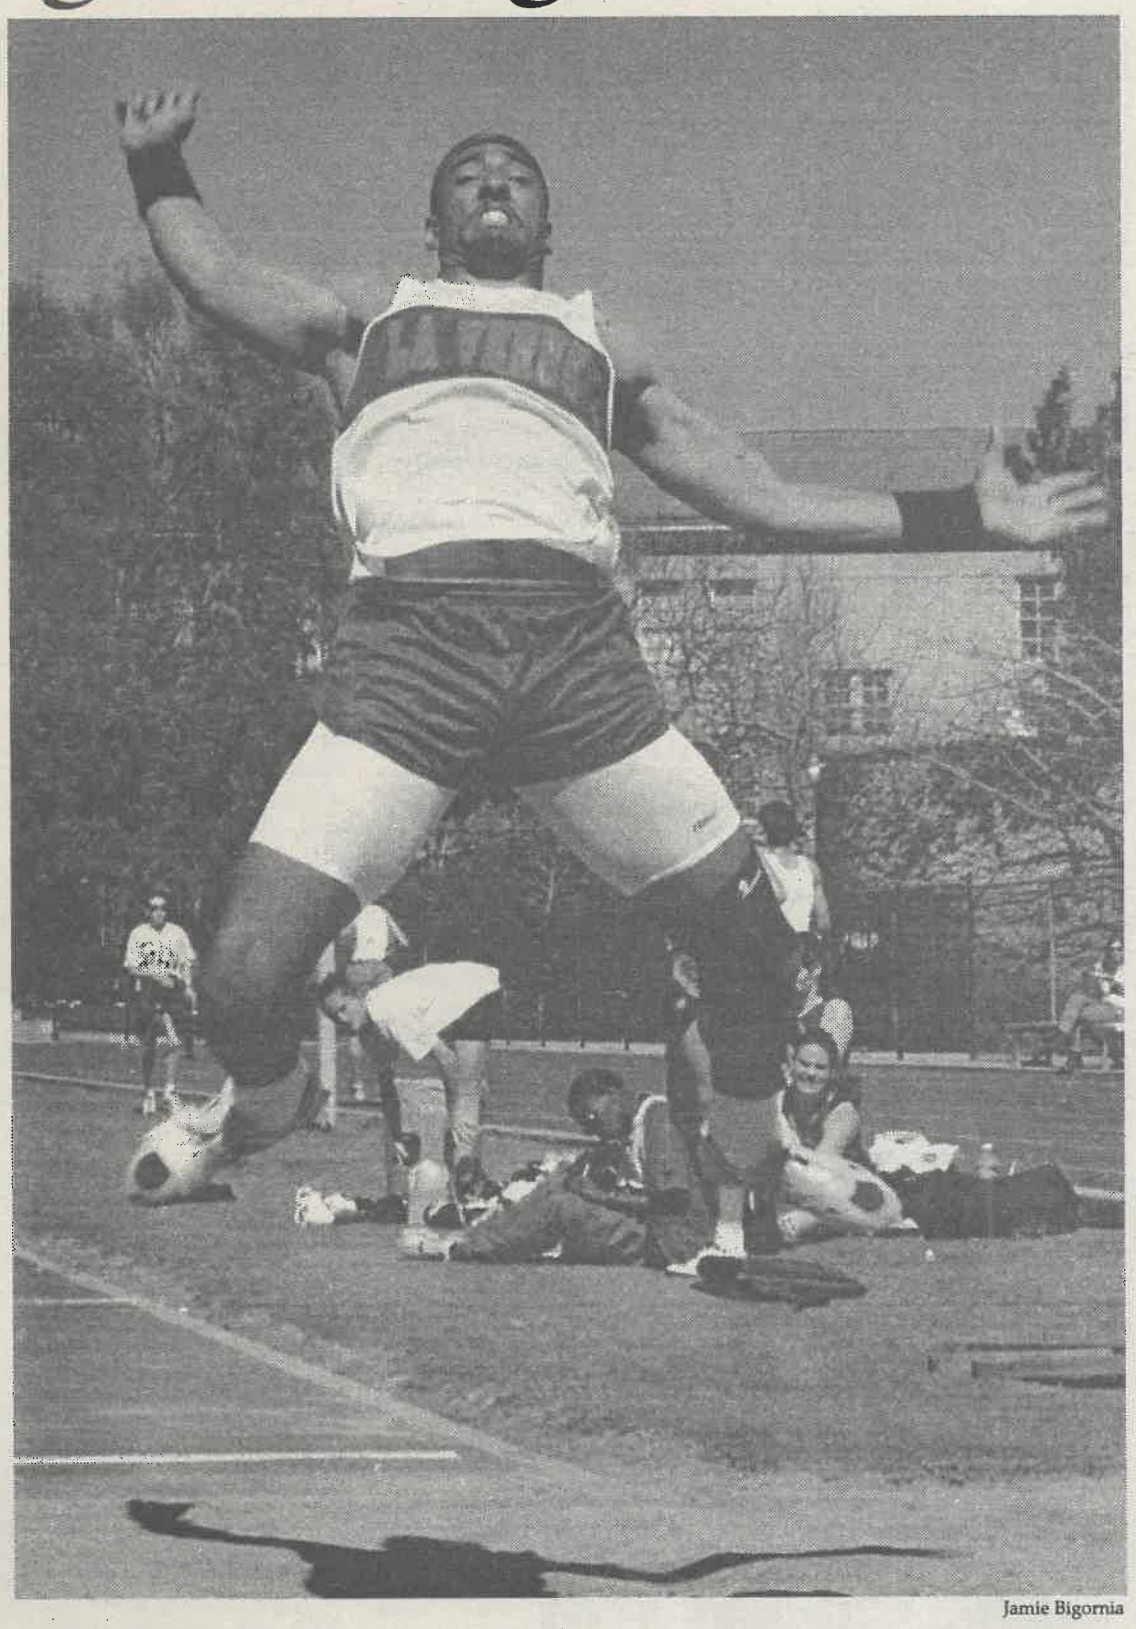

The women's 100m hurdles was won by Hall with a time of 15.59. Garcia placed fourth, finishing at 17.58.

Garcia improved on her position in the women's 400m hurdles with a third place finish at 71.09. She was edged out by teammate Mitchell, who finished second with a time of 69.32.

The men took the first two spots of the 200m event, with Wilson first at 22.60 and Rudolph second with a time of 22.94.

In the steeplechase, senior Gilbert Gomez finished third at 10:45.59.

La Verne's next meet will be tomorrow at Claremont against Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, Redlands and Occidental at 11 a.m.

Senior Carl Caston jumped into a tie for second place in the 1997 SCIAC Quad Meet finals of the men's long jump competition last Saturday. Caston also placed fourth in the men's triple jump.

Women's tennis defeats Biola, falls to Redlands, Occidental

by Ramzi Rabadi
Staff Writer

The University of La Verne women's tennis team won its first match of the year against Biola, but was outplayed this weekend by the more experienced Redlands and Occidental teams.

The victory against Biola was pulled off, 5-4, with excellent play from junior Emily Judd.

Judd's game was the key for La Verne's win, taking the match to three sets.

"Emily Judd won a pivotal singles match," head coach Erin Hendricks said.

Last Friday, the Leopards were annihilated at home by the undefeated Bulldogs, 5-0.

"We played horrible," said graduate student Catherine Padilla.

In the doubles match, which consisted of senior Tiffany Hall and Judd, the Leopards were dominated in the first set. In the second set they were able to get themselves under control to grab three games.

"Our doubles were better than our singles," sophomore Pauline Duran said.

According to Hendricks, the Bulldogs are a good team and it would be difficult to defeat them.

The following day, the Leopards received the same result, losing 9-0 to the Occidental Tigers in Eagle Rock.

According to Hendricks, the score is misleading because a lot of the matches were very close.

At one point, sophomore Tracy MacArthur and Hall were in close, down 5-4, before losing.

Also, Hall and Judd, playing doubles, were in the same situation, down 5-4, and had the same result as before, a set slipped away.

The Leopards had similar matches all day long, where nothing went their way.

"We played with a lot enthusiasm," said junior Sandy Thay.

Overall Hendricks was pleased with the play against the Tigers.

Today, the Leopards will play an important match at 2 p.m. against Caltech at home in the Blickenstaff Tennis Pavilion, which may determine seedings in the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (SCIAC) tournament.

"Were going to beat Caltech," Judd said.

Hendricks agrees that today's match is a must win, for a good finish in SCIAC.

Miner strikes gold with basketball

by Amy M. Boyle
Staff Writer

Sports, for many students at the University of La Verne, are just another part of their daily lives. For senior Katie Miner, sports, and basketball in particular, are not only a part of her daily life but have become like second nature to her, something she can do without even thinking about it.

"I used to play with my dad and brother when I was younger," said Miner. She has been participating in basketball since she was in the fourth grade. Having a natural talent for the sport, Miner played for a junior high school team while she was still in elementary school.

In eighth grade, Miner participated in a traveling basketball team that played around the country during the summer.

"This gave me a lot more experience in playing the sport and prepared me for playing on a high school team," said Miner.

Miner attended Wilson High School in Hacienda Heights. For Miner's first three years of high school, Julie Kline, ULV's women's softball and basketball head coach, was her basketball coach.

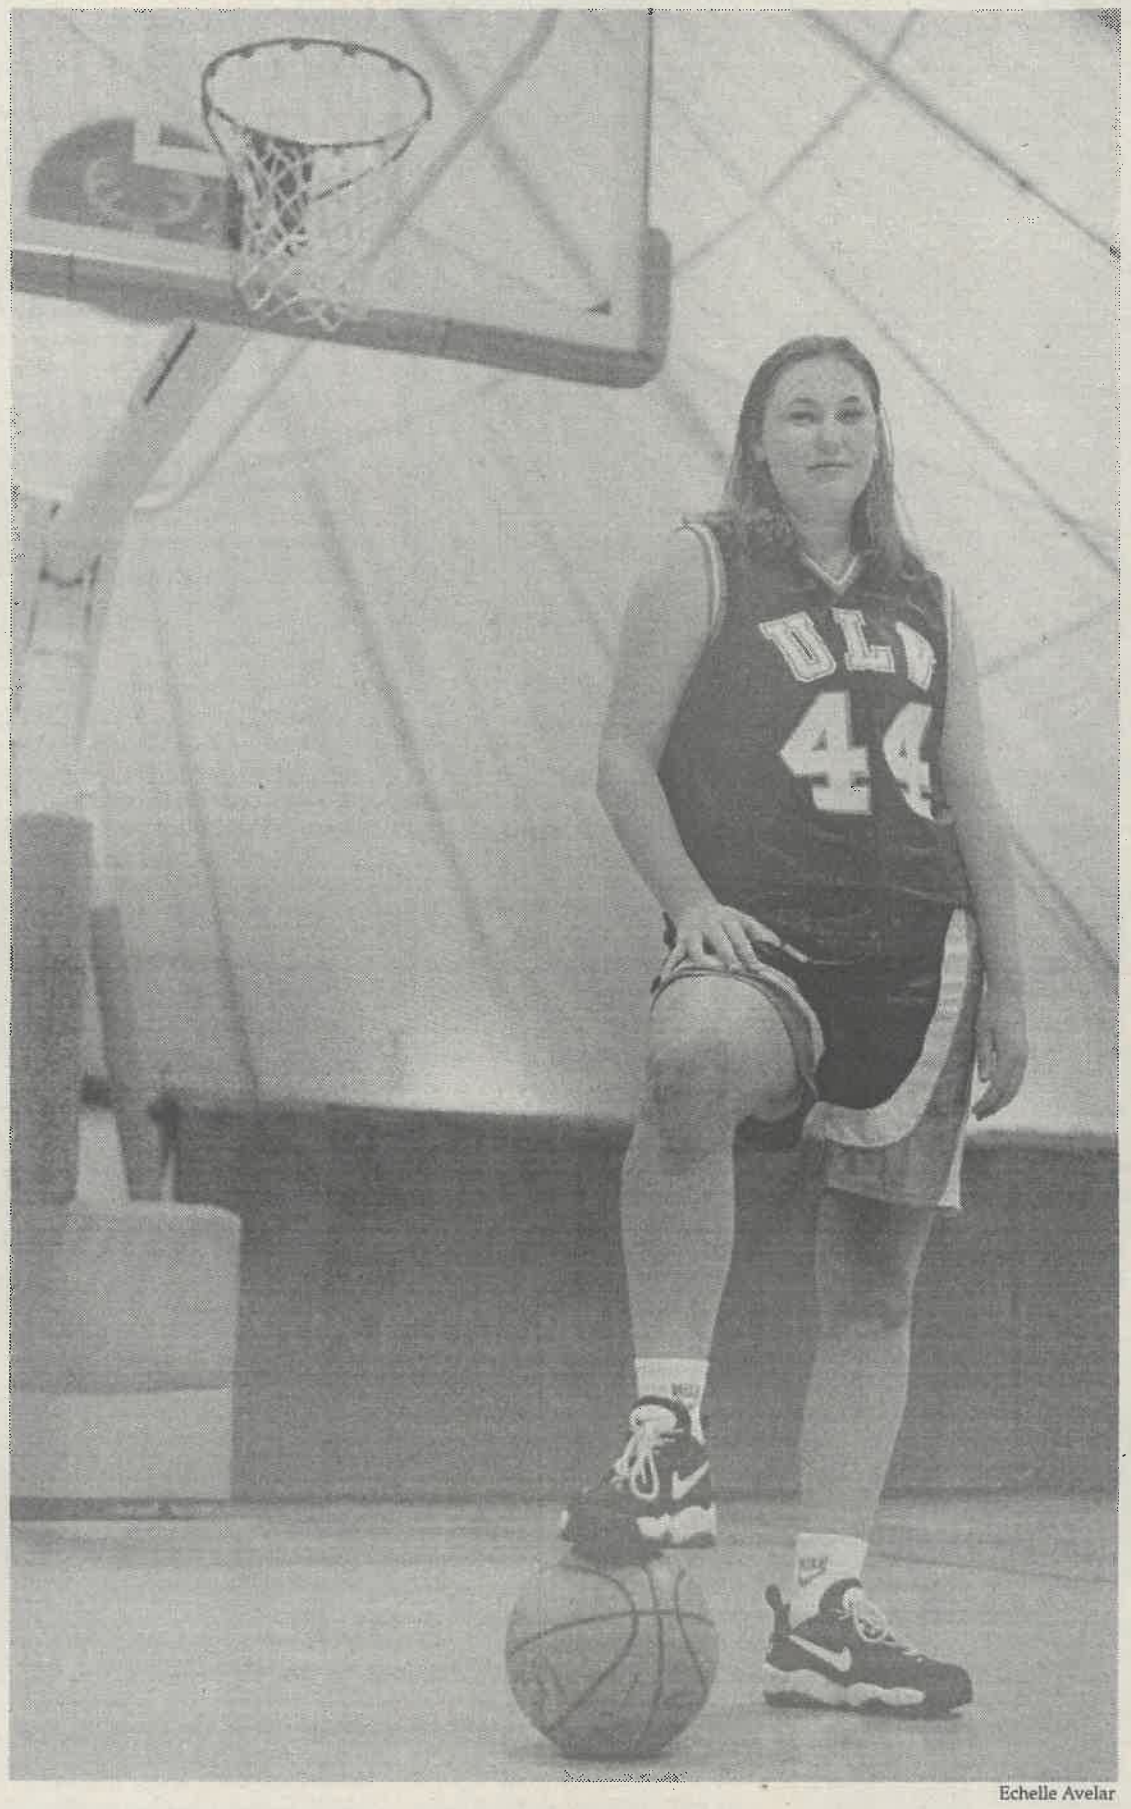

"Katie is a winner. She gives you her heart and soul whether it be as a daughter, friend or as a player. Katie is honest, loyal and one of the most genuine human beings I know," said Kline.

During Miner's senior year in high school, she was named "Player of the Year" in the San Gabriel Valley by both the Los Angeles Times and the San Gabriel Valley Tribune.

When Kline moved on to ULV to continue coaching at the collegiate level, Miner wanted to follow but due to financial restrictions could not attend her first two years at ULV. Miner decided to attend Golden West College in Huntington Beach, where she continued her basketball career.

While at Golden West, Miner made All-Conference her first two years in college. After completing two years at Golden West, Miner was finally able to transfer to ULV and become a member of the women's basketball team under the leadership of Kline once again.

"Julie[Kline] is very supportive, she has taught me to work hard for the things I want," said Miner.

Echelle Avelar

Senior Katie Miner, a transfer from Golden West College in Huntington Beach, has started for the women's basketball team for the past two years. Head coach Julie Kline has taught the 21-year-old Miner since her sophomore year at Wilson High School in Hacienda Heights.

"Katie's first love is basketball. She is a complete player on and off the court, both on the offensive and defensive end," said Kline.

Being on ULV's basketball team, Miner has once again found success. Last year she made the second team for All-Conference. As for this year's team, "We have had a lot of injuries with our players. We have the talent, we just haven't been able to put it together, all five of us on the court. So, all the injuries have just been a challenge for our team," said Miner.

Freshman Lori Johnson, another member of the women's basketball team, believes she has learned a lot from Miner.

"She is a real good player. She works hard and is dedicated to the game. I've learned defensive and offensive positions from her, how to have a good attitude in the game, and how and when to step up or move my game to another level in a tough decision," said Johnson.

Miner not only faces basketball in her daily life, but is also a diversified major, taking eighteen units a semester to graduate on time. She hopes to become an elementary school teacher one day, although her first choice in careers would to be a firefighter.

"Los Angeles County Fire Department is hiring, so I could go in as a college graduate not needing any prior training," said Miner.

"I'm used to being busy all the time. Good things come out when you work hard, and so far I've accomplished everything I've wanted to accomplish," she said.

"One of Katie's best qualities is the inner strength she has and the level of confidence she carries with her into everything she does. She sometimes cares so much about people and what she does, that she allows it to drain everything out of her," said Kline.

In her spare time, Miner loves going to the beach. In the summer, she heads to Mexico for snorkeling and scuba diving.

As for her future, Miner wants to graduate, start her career, find a husband and "do the whole family thing. I have a real strong family. My parents have been supportive of everything I've done. They have never pressured me to do anything, just have always been real supportive," said Miner.

"I know without any reservations and complete confidence Katie Miner will be successful in everything she does. She accepts nothing short of success. She will always be a part of who I am as a person and as a coach. Katie's work ethic is a model for all athletes. Just by watching her practice and compete, people can learn lessons of life on what it takes to be successful," said Kline.

Leopards bounce back against Pomona-Pitzer

by Heather Morales
Staff Writer

Last Saturday, the softball team completely dominated Pomona-Pitzer in the second game of the doubleheader, 16-3, after losing the first game, 9-8, in eight innings.

It was a slow start for the Leopards in the first game as they had to claw their way back into it when the Sagehens took a 5-1 lead in the fifth inning.

La Verne answered back in the fifth when junior Liz Lomeli scored on a single by senior center fielder Kelly Perkins. She scored on a double by senior shortstop Loree Grey.

Before the end of the inning, Grey scored on a single by sophomore first baseman Angel Mejico and the score was 5-4.

Pomona increased its lead in the sixth, scoring three more runs to make it 8-4.

The bases were loaded in the seventh when Mejico stepped up to the plate and launched a home run to tie it 8-8 and send the game into extra innings.

The extra inning did not last long as the Sagehens were able to score one more run to defeat the Leopards 9-8.

After coming close to winning the first game, the Leopards pulled themselves together, came back and mauled the Sagehens in the second.

"We had a discussion between the games where I told them that we have to pull things together if we want to be competitive at our level," said head coach Julie Kline.

In the first, La Verne's defense kept Pomona off the bases, but Pomona could not keep La Verne from getting on.

"We executed our plays at the plate and we were more aggressive," said Lomeli. "Our intensity level was higher (than in the first game)."

The Leopards sent 13 batters to the plate and scored nine runs to take an enormous lead over the Sagehens.

In the third inning, two more runs were scored when junior Jenna Bowman scored on a single by Perkins to make it 10-0. Bowman was on base on an error by Pomona first baseman Keeley Wynne.

The Sagehens scored their first runs in the fourth with two, but another big inning for the Leopards in the fourth sent 11 batters to the plate. They scored another six runs to make the score 16-2.

In the fifth the Sagehens scored another run but it was not enough to catch up to the lead that La Verne had built. The game was called on a mercy ruling after 4 1/2 innings and the Leopards came out on top, 16-3.

"We were pumped up and we had our heads in the game," said Lomeli.

On Tuesday, the Leopards battled the Wartburg Knights, from Iowa. In the first game, La Verne came back from a 7-0 deficit to win the game 8-7.

The Leopards won the second game, 7-2. Grey and freshman Teka Clayton both had homeruns in the game.

"We realize that we're going to have to score six or seven runs each game if we want to win games," said Kline.

Today, La Verne plays No. 1 ranked Cal Lutheran at 2 p.m. in Thousand Oaks.

Men's tennis struggles against Oxy at home

by Landus Rigsby
Staff Writer

Youth came into play once again as the young University of La Verne men's tennis team dropped its seventh match in a row, losing to the Occidental Tigers 9-0 last Saturday.

ULV was led by sophomore David Dang, who presented the best showing for the Leopards, but was eventually overtaken by Occidental's BJ Grant 6-1 and 6-3. Johnny McCool experienced an even tougher match than Dang, but was not able to overcome Arnell Balbuena of Occidental, losing 6-0 and 6-2. Freshman Grant Schmidt also put up a courageous challenge against Oxy's Eric Gibbs, but fell short 6-0 and 6-2.

'The team is very young, but we have a lot of potential.'
—David Dang, sophomore

"The team is very young, but we have a lot of potential," said Dang. "It is just a matter of us getting over the hump."

Dang and McCool proved to be the most effective team for the Leopards in doubles, but Oxy's duo of Grant and Balbuena went on to take the Leopards in two consecutive sets, 6-1, 6-3. Junior Frank Zappia and Schmidt attempted to defeat Occidental's tandem of Gibbs and Calvin Liang, but were defeated 6-2, 6-1.

"My coaching philosophy on team play is that I want to know that whether we win or lose, we gave 100 percent," said ULV head coach Tim Fitzgerald.

Friday, Feb. 28, the Leopards matched themselves against the Panthers (4-4) at Chapman. La Verne experienced more of the same problems they had against Occidental. The Leopards were defeated by the same score that Occidental won by. Chapman shut out the Leopards, taking the match, 9-0.

In singles competition, Dang desperately tried to get the advantage on ULV's side, but fell prey to Chapman's James Baker, 6-3, 6-2. Juniors Aung Wun and Zappia were not able to shake the Panthers as they were defeated 6-1, 6-1 and 6-0, 6-2 respectively.

Chapman was just as effective against La Verne in doubles as well as singles, using the team of senior Yukuta Nakamura and freshman Su Dang to shut out the combination of Dang and Zappia 6-0, 6-0.

"We all get along, we play pretty much as a team. Everybody is pulling for each other," Fitzgerald said.

"There are matches that we should have won, but we didn't, said Dang. "We are actually coming together. We now have something that is solid."

The 0-7 Leopards will look for its first win against the Caltech Beavers (0-4, 2-5) today at 3 p.m. in Pasadena and will host Biola tomorrow at 10 a.m.

Volleyball gets set, spiked

by Katrina Hall
Staff Writer

The University of La Verne men's volleyball team has been trying to crawl out of the slump it has been in, but are not having any luck thus far.

On March 1, UC Santa Barbara, ranked 7th nationally, showed ULV why by taking the win in Santa Barbara over all three matches 14-16, 9-15, and 13-15.

ULV was dealing with a team who was quicker on their feet with higher vertical range and a stronger drive.

"We are playing against some of the best teams in the country aside from the Olympics which causes a little intimidation," said head coach Don Flora, in his fourth season.

ULV played a fair game against Cal State San Bernardino but fell short of glory, losing after three games on Feb. 28 at home.

The first game was led and won by San Bernardino 7-15. They started out strong and finished the game winning.

In the second game, ULV came closer to victory but just could not get shots past San Bernardino's blockers and spikers who worked very well together. The game ended with the score being 13-15.

The third game started with ULV leading by 10. With three points left to score for a win in the match, ULV tightened up and allowed San Bernardino to come back strong and steal the win 15-17.

"It is purely a mental focus and inability to finish the job to win," said Flora.

ULV freshman James Klinkoski and transfer junior setter Morgan Coberly teamed up to hold a strong defense to block San Bernardino's attempted spikes while transfer junior middle blocker Troy Langley contributed to the quick scoring with powerful spikes.

"We lack team leadership due partly because we are a new team who is not connecting with each other," said Langley. "We're just not going in the same direction."

Once again the Leopards lost, this time to San Diego State, 4-1 on Feb. 27 at San Diego.

"This group enjoys playing volleyball," said Flora. "They came out against San Diego Sate and played hard and they put effort in it."

Part of the reason why the Leopards might be losing is because 6'8" freshman middle blocker Adam Black has been out since Feb. 26 with a severely sprained ankle. This accident occurred the night before the game against San Diego State.

Black is nationally ranked third in blocks per game and is ranked sixth in the country in hits. He is expected to be back for the next game.

Schneider is also ranked seventh nationally in kills per game, as is Klinkoski who is ranked 6th in kills per game.

"This is a building year for us since our key players are freshmen," said Coberly. "We haven't played together enough to be strong this year and it will help later."

"Everyone is coming back next season except one senior, Rob Schneider who will be a loss," Flora said. "We need more cohesive understanding and trust with each other."

For ULV to dig it self out of the hole in the three weeks before the end of the season, it will need to first put its egos aside.

"We have more ego then any team sport needs," said Flora.

After that is done, every individual must continue to be positive and work toward that goal. Also, the intensity level needs to be up with energy and a decrease in errors will help clinch a win.

"The team in general get along fairly well although it has been a struggle getting to know each other," said Flora. "We have a pretty good communication line though it could be better."

This is mainly due to not being a full-time coach.

Despite ULV's volleyball record of 1-12 overall as NCAA independent, it is ranked 5th in the country for Division III and 75 percent of the schools La Verne plays are nationally ranked Division I schools.

The Leopards' next game is tomorrow against UC Irvine at home and starts at 7pm.

Leopards lose three in a row

by Ryan Sones
Staff Writer

A University of Redlands three game sweep of the University of La Verne's baseball team is something that many may have never expected, let alone fathomed. Expectations are sometimes too great however, and this last week La Verne has been picking up the pieces from a three game sweep by the Redlands squad.

Head coach Owen Wright said, "Baseball is such a mental game, much more than most people realize. Once you get off the tracks it is all so difficult to get back on those tracks. On Friday we started off on the wrong track and fell off those tracks for the remainder of the weekend."

The three game series began at Redlands last Friday as La Verne was able to find home plate once in the period of the first six innings. In the other dugout there was Redlands, planning an offensive barrage of runs going up 7-1 by scoring three in the third and sending around four more runs in the fourth.

La Verne rallied in the seventh inning for three runs and then again in the ninth for two more only to come up short by a run and lost the first game 7-6.

Senior pitcher Sean Caldwell said,"We are just really struggling right now. It is a team effort, and I know I didn't have a good day Friday. We had decent hitting, it just came a little late in the game."

The second game of the series was Saturday morning with excellent conditions at Ben Hine's Field. La Verne once again got on the board with a run in the first only to be shut down until the sixth. It looked like a replay from the previous day, as Redlands quickly went up 6-0 by the first half of the game and La Verne was left to make up ground the whole rest of the way. The La Verne effort came in the seventh as senior shortstop Brock Whobrey singled and two batters later were driven in by a double from the bat of senior right fielder Seth Marrs.

'Baseball is such a mental game, much more than most people realize. Once you get off the tracks it is all so difficult to get back on those tracks.'
—Owen Wright, head coach

The momentum of the rally was again found in the ninth as La Verne looked to have maybe pulled the game off by digging in and scoring three runs and with no outs bringing the score to 6-8 in Redlands' favor.

La Verne's third baseman sophomore Eric Britton brought the game within one as he reached home on a fielder's choice. However, efforts came up short as the game came to a close with La Verne dropping the second game 9-8.

In the final game of the series, it looked to be becoming a pitcher's duel until La Verne finally broke the ice scoring two runs in the fourth as a triple was ripped by Britton. Britton managed a half-off discount home as he reached the main course plate on a passed ball by the Redlands pitcher. Sophomore outfielder, Shyaam Butler, was up next and with an elegant display of power sent a ball past the Hubble into orbit over the left field net for the solo dinger.

Butler said, "We tend to cringe under pressure. Once we get ahead of someone, we need to learn to hold on to that lead. Lately we have just been buckling up under the pressure."

Redlands was able to retaliate as they sent three runs around the bases the very next inning. Redlands pitching tightened up the rest pf the game allowing only three more hits the rest of the game as the Redlands offense was able to put the game on the shelf scoring three more in the eighth. Redlands completed the sweep.

The baseball team plays today at Ben Hines Field against Occidental College at 2:30.
